Dulles Turns Down Russian Summit Talks

Gives Basis For Further Parleys With Red Bosses

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (UP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles today brusquely rejected the latest proposal of Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin for an East-West "summit" conference in the next two or three months.

He told a news conference he believed extensive preliminary negotiation on a lower diplomatic level would have to produce some probability of success before a conference of chiefs of state would be worthwhile.

Dulles reiterated that any preliminary talks should include discussions through regular diplomatic channels, foreign ministers' conference, or both.

Questions Motives

Dulles sharply questioned the motives of Bulganin for proposing an East-West "summit" meeting again at this particular time. The proposal was made to the United States and its 14 NATO allies Thursday.

The secretary said he believed the move was designed to overshadow President Eisenhower's State of the Union message which challenged the Russians to join this country in a dramatic "science-for-peace" campaign.

He said it also may have been aimed to influence current NATO discussions on the U. S. reply to Bulganin's first proposal to President Eisenhower in mid-December for a summit conference.

Dulles said that State Department experts who studied Friday's notes felt the only significance was in their timing, not their substance.

'Massive Retaliation'

He called Bulganin's latest proposal a "massive retaliation of prior proposals" made by Soviet officials and summarized in Bulganin's December proposal.

And he criticized Bulganin for adopting "what may be called

Downs To Seek Responsibility Law Changes

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 10 (UP)—Sen. C.H. Downs today said he will attempt in the next Legislature to have innocent victims removed from liability under the state motor vehicle responsibility law.

Downs said his plans were spurred by a Louisiana Department of Public Safety Department move to revoke a woman driver's license and license plates because she had no liability insurance.

Downs of Rapides Parish said his proposed measure would relieve persons involved in accidents of responsibility if the other party is found guilty of criminal charges subject to civil judgment. Such persons would not lose their rights to drive, he said.

Present law, Downs said, makes the owner of any vehicle involved in an accident finally responsible for damages and injury to other parties although the other party may be clearly responsible for the accident.

Downs cited the case of Mrs. Dorothy A. Crooks, injured seriously last May 23 in an accident that also resulted in the death of a 10-month-old child.

Pablo C. Guzman, driver of the other car, is serving two years in Rapides Parish Jail for negligent homicide as a result of the accident. The Crooks family also won an uncontested $60,000 judgment.

Aged Vicksburg Merchant Shot

VICKSBURG, Miss., Jan. 10 (UP)—An 82-year-old liquor dealer was shot critically last night during the robbery of his store.

Police identified him as Fred Schmidt and said he was shot in the shoulder and neck.

Officers said Schmidt told them two Negroes pointed pistols at him and demanded his money.

Strange Object Streaks Across District Skies

WISNER (Special) — An eerie orange colored oval-shaped object floating in the western skies shot several "whitish - colored" balls of fire earthward and then faded away last night, witnesses said.

The Associated Press said it was "A rarely among unidentified flying objects."

Townfolk said the object moved from the west in a northeasterly direction for 10 to 15 minutes when it suddenly put on a spectacular silent fireworks display at about 6:30 p.m.

The object was described as being two or three times as large as the evening star—Venus—appeared to the naked eye and appeared to be at a tremendous height.

Mrs. D. R. Knight said several Negroes who were shooting blackbirds near her home first spotted the object, and becoming frightened, called out to her.

Called Fantastic

"It's fantastic," Mrs. Knight said, "I ran out to see it and it looked like a red disc ball and fire seemed to be appearing from it."

"I started to run back into the house and more fire seemed to be appearing."

School board member A. J. Engsminger said Mrs. Knight called him "and I could see it very plainly over in the west . . . oval shaped, reddish or orange in color."

Frank Wetzel Gets Life For Cop's Slaying

ROCKINGHAM, N.C., Jan. 10 (UP)—A Rockingham County court jury today convicted Frank Edward Wetzel, 36-year-old New York ex-convict, of first-degree murder in the slaying of a North Carolina highway patrolman.

The jury of 10 men and two women, which debated more than three hours, recommended mercy for the stockily built fugitive from a New York mental institution. Judge J. A. Rousseau immediately sentenced him to life in prison, a sentence mandatory under North Carolina law.

A $35,000 appeal bond was set when the defendant said through his court-appointed attorney he would appeal today's verdict to the State Supreme Court.

A shout went up from a packed courtroom of 900 when the jury announced its verdict, although Judge Rousseau had warned against any demonstration. The crowd obviously was pleased with the verdict.

Everybody Nice

Wetzel stood up before the crowd and remarked in a strong, clear voice: "Everybody has been nice to me in North Carolina and I appreciate it."

Mrs. Wister Lee Reece, widow of the patrolman Wetzel shot down without warning on the night of Nov. 3, bowed her head and wept. She had attended the trial in company with Mrs. J. T. Brown, wife of another patrolman gunned down the same night. Wetzel also is accused of this killing, but was tried only for the Reece shooting.

Later Mrs. Reece collapsed and was led into an ante-room by a brother-in-law, the Rev. Fred Reece.

Wetzel watched her led away, then rose and addressed the audience.

"Everybody has been nice to me in North Carolina and I appreciate it," he said. Later he told reporters, "I don't think I should have been convicted."

Meany Warns Rackets Probe 'Gone Too Far'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (UP)—AFL-CIO President George Meany warned Senate rackets investigators at a recent Senate dinner meeting that they had "gone too far" in some cases, it was disclosed today.

However, Rackets Committee Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) told newsmen that the committee would go ahead with its politically-ticklish investigation of Walter P. Reuther's United Auto Workers.

McClellan declined to give details of the secret Wednesday night meeting which was attended by committee members and members of the AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee.

Others Present

Among those present besides Meany and McClellan were Sens. Irving M. Ives (R-N.Y.) and John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.). Senate Committee Counsel Robert F. Kennedy and AFL-CIO Committee Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg.

An AFL-CIO spokesman said Meany relayed the belief of the recent AFL-CIO convention that rackets investigators might be indulging in "political retaliation" against labor.

The statement was an apparent reference to GOP committee members Karl E. Mundt (S.D.), Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) and Carl T. Curtis (Neb.). They have feuded with McClellan and other members over the handling of the Auto Workers investigation.

Accident Fatal To Meridian Worker

MERIDIAN, Miss., Jan. 10 (UP)—Thomas Jefferson Cook, 35-year-old construction worker, died today when a heavy timber toppled and struck him in the neck.

Survivors include his widow and four children, who live at Key Field.

Girl, 12, Wed To Man, 67; 4 Are Arrested

LIMA Mo., Jan. 10 (UP)—The hill country romance of a 67-year-old pensioner and a 12-year-old school girl today had four persons in trouble with the law.

Officers stepped in Wednesday night less than two hours after James Harris and Patsy Ellwood a seventh-grade pupil at Belle Mo. were married.

The bridegroom is in jail. So is the girl's father Thomas Ellwood, an odd jobs man. Both are charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The same charge was filed against Mrs. Ellwood but she was allowed to remain at home to care for four younger children the smallest a 1-year-old.

The child bride is in custody of the Osage County Juvenile Court and is staying at a private home.

Under Missouri law a girl under 15 cannot marry and if she is under 18 she must have her parents' consent.

Both Harris and Ellwood are seeking bonds of $1,000 each so they can leave jail. Their hearing has been set for Feb. 10.

Harris whose wife died a year ago and the Ellwood girl have been seen together at public gatherings in Belle, Mo., since last July.

"I just wanted a housekeeper," Harris said.

In their marriage license application at Rolla, Mo., he gave his age as 50 and she told officials she was 18. School records, however, showed the girl was 12.

The mother of the girl accompanied the couple to Bland, Mo., where the couple was married in the home of Rev. Roy Jett, pastor of the College Hill Baptist Church.

The minister said the bride looked younger than 18, but he pointed out the marriage license gave her age as 18.

The girl's mother, about 35, said she had married "an old man" and she had no objections to her daughter doing so. Ellwood is about 70.

Arkansans are expected to have partly cloudy skies also, with cool temperatures and some showers.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP)—A 22-day silence at America's missile test center was shattered with a bang today when two intercontinental weapons—the Atlas and the Navaho—blasted off in rapid succession.

The Atlas, heaviest weapon hanging over the heads of U.S. enemies, made a fiery and thundering departure from its launching platform at 10:48 a.m. Fifteen minutes later, the Defense Department said "the beast" performed accurately over a limited range.

At 2:38 p.m., the now obsolete Navaho roared skyward and followed the Atlas trail down across the chain of missile-tracking stations that reaches more than 5,000 miles from here to the southern tip of Africa.

The Atlas, designed to carry a hydrogen warhead across the seas at a speed of 10,000 miles an hour, is this country's only intercontinental ballistic missile—ICBM—which has been tested. Another, the Titan, is not yet ready for firing.

Although it also has a 5,000-mile range, the Navaho is powered by a ramjet engine and is capable of speeds of only about 1,000 miles an hour, which could make it an easy prey for faster flying jet attack planes.

Man Wins Fight To Keep Tax Money

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (UP)—An 80-year-old engineering consultant today won a 10-year fight to keep a $2,528.71 income tax refund which the Internal Revenue Service sent him in 1945 by mistake.

A ruling by 84-year-old U.S. District Judge Robert A. Inch said that the statute of limitations barred the government from recovering the money from Louis W. Williams of Brooklyn.

Williams, informed of the decision by his attorney, Miss Jean Fitzsimmons, chuckled and said: "I spent the money a long time ago."

The government had sued for a total of $3,024.83, including the erroneous $2,528.71 refund, and an additional $496.12 which the government claims he should have paid in 1945 income taxes, but didn't.

Says Plan Duplication Of Ability

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—An Air Force general tonight challenged President Eisenhower's plan for a separate and unified space agency.

Maj. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, boss of the Air Force missile program, contended the plan is a costly duplication of Air Force abilities to send a manned satellite to the moon and back in a few years.

Schriever made his criticism of this and other Defense Department decisions in prepared statement to the Senate Preparedness Investigation subcommittee yesterday. This was within hours of the time Eisenhower was telling the nation he was setting up a separate group to manage new space projects.

Made Public

The Air Force made the testimony public tonight.

It was the latest episode in what some sources are beginning to call "a revolt of the generals."

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, Army chief of research and development, is retiring because, he says, the Army is deteriorating rapidly and "I can't get anything done" about it. And Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, has told the Senate committee that Eisenhower has not asked enough money in connection with a planned stepup of the intercontinental ballistic missile — ICBM.

Schriever, in his testimony, also criticized a Defense Department decision to use both the Army-developed Jupiter and the Air Force Thor as intermediate-range ballistic missiles — IRBM.

Schriever said that, if a decision is made immediately to increase production rates, "twice as many operational IRBM squadrons, all Thor 'equipped' can be 'employed' by early 1960 and that the first two Thor squadrons would be overseas by the end of calendar year 1958.

Would Be Blunder

Saying that it would be "a colossal blunder" if the United States failed to do more than match every Soviet missile with one of its own, Schriever demanded that the nation "recognize where our strongest capabilities

Hungary Gives Life Sentence To Catholic Priest

VIENNA, Jan. 10 (UP) — A Communist Hungarian court today sentenced Msgr. Albert Egon Turcsanyi, former secretary to Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, to life imprisonment for counter-revolutionary activities, informed sources here reported.

A spokesman for the official Hungarian News Agency, MTI, contacted by telephone in Budapest, refused to confirm or deny the report.

Msgr. Turcsanyi and 17 co-defendants were tried in Budapest from Dec. 3 to Jan. 8 by a court headed by Judge Mathilde Toth, the so-called "hanging" judge, the sources said.

The other defendants included 15 Roman Catholic Priest and theology students and two laymen. The sources said they received prison terms up to 10 years.

All defendants were charged with looting the files of the Roman Catholic church office during the Hungarian freedom uprising in late 1956. Msgr. Turcsanyi also was charged with attempting to flee Hungary "illegally" after Soviet troops had crushed the rebellion.

He became Cardinal Mindszenty's secretary during the brief period of freedom the Cardinal enjoyed after his release from Communist captivity.

Bluebloods Nabbed In Gambling Raid

LONDON, Jan. 10 (UP)—Twenty-four embarrassed British bluebloods were haled into court today after an early morning gambling raid on the swank Mayfair apartment of Lady Mary Osborne.

It was London's biggest society raid in years.

Among those arrested are: Pretty Lady Nancy Jane Marie Heathcote—Drummond-Wiloughby, 23, daughter of the Earl of Ancaster and a train bearer to Queen Elizabeth II at her coronation; Lord Willoughby de Eresby, 21; Lady Mary Grace Osborne, 54; and William James Cavendish-Bentick, son of a former British ambassador to Poland.

Lady Osborne was charged with keeping a common gaming house at her apartment in one of London's smartest residential districts.

Lady Nancy Jane, Lord Willoughby and Cavendish-Bentick were accused of being found on the premises of a gambling house.

Lady Osborne's son, 31-year-old John Aspinwall, was charged with being concerned in keeping a gambling house. His beautiful wife, Jayne, a former model, was taken in, too.

Magistrate Walter Frampton asked all 24 whether they would put up 25 pounds—$70—and be bound over on a promise of keeping away from gambling houses.

Sixteen of them—including Lady Nancy Jane, Lord Willoughby, and Cavendish-Bentick—agreed.

The other eight—including Aspinwall and Lady Osborne—were fined. They put up 50 pounds—$140—and were asked to appear for a formal hearing on Feb. 12.

A spokesman for the official Hungarian News Agency MTI, contacted by telephone in Budapest, refused to confirm or deny the report.

Msgr. Turcsanyi and 17 co-defendants were tried in Budapest from Dec. 3 to Jan. 8 by a court headed by Judge Mathilde Toth, the so-called "hanging" judge, the sources said.

The other defendants included 15 Roman Catholic Priest and theology students and two laymen. The sources said they received prison terms up to 10 years.

All defendants were charged with looting the files of the Roman Catholic church office during the Hungarian freedom uprising in late 1956. Msgr. Turcsanyi also was charged with attempting to flee Hungary "illegally" after Soviet troops had crushed the rebellion.

He became Cardinal Mindszenty's secretary during the brief period of freedom the Cardinal enjoyed after his release from Communist captivity.

But Downs said the Public Safety Department sought to revoke Mrs. Crooks' license and her husband's auto license as well, unless the family can prove ability to pay for damages to Guzman's car.

Downs termed this phase of the responsibility law "ridiculous" and said the Crooks case is not the most inequitable he has seen.

The Public Safety Department notified Mrs. Crooks, her attorney said, that the fact that Guzman was convicted of negligent homicide did not relieve the Crooks family of responsibility.

It proved that the test center is no "one-shot institution," for it was the first time that two huge missiles ever had been fired in such close proximity.

The distance the three-stage Atlas flew today probably was about 600 miles, the same range covered by another Atlas last Dec. 17 in the first successful test of the weapon. Two earlier shots ended in failure when the missiles strayed off course and were destroyed soon after leaving the ground.

No effort to shoot the 100-ton Atlas over its full range is expected until late this year.

The Atlas was a thing of awesome power when it rose skyward this hazy day, its tail a massive ball of orange flame.

It was in view for three minutes as it bowed its way toward the heavens, climbing very slowly and majestically at first, then gathering speed as its boosters kicked it over into an arching trajectory toward the southeast.

Long after it disappeared into high cloud banks, the thunder of its mighty engines could be heard.

to maximum security central prison in Raleigh tomorrow to await outcome of his appeal, or for action on raising the heavy bond which could free him.

Solicitor (prosecutor) W. Jack Hooks whose district includes Lee County, announced he would bring Wetzel to trial for the slaying of the second patrolman and would seek the death penalty.

Defense counsel John Thomas P. Martin of Buffalo, N.Y., said he doubted if the bond could be raised to free Wetzel pending outcome of the appeal. But Hooks' decision to bring him to trial on the second murder charge would prevent Wetzel gaining freedom under bond, even if the amount was raised.

Authorities said Wetzel was convicted three times of felonies in New York state, where four such convictions make a life sentence mandatory.

Officials said that Wetzel had told other hospital inmates that he would escape and go to Parchman, Miss., where he would try to free his younger brother, William, 35, who is awaiting execution for slaying another prisoner. The execution is scheduled a week from today.

Reece, 23, of Hamlet, married 13 years and the father of three children, was gunned down as he stopped an automobile for speeding on U.S. 220 near Elberne in south central North Carolina, 100 miles east of Charlotte.

Police started a search for the 1957 black Oldsmobile, and an hour later highway patrolman J. T. Brown of Sanford, father of four children, was fatally wounded as he tried to stop it. The second slaying occurred near Sanford, some 30 miles northeast of the first.

That touched off a nationwide search by the FBI and policemen from the east coast to the west coast.

Two weeks after the slayings, Wetzel was arrested on a vagrancy charge in Bakersfield, Calif. But it was not until two days after the arrest on Nov. 21, that it became known through fingerprints that the vagrant was the object of a nationwide hunt.

In the two-week search, a trail of wrecked and stolen cars led through Tennessee and Kentucky, and suspects answering Wetzel's description were picked up and released in half a dozen states.

Police said the car which the two patrolmen had tried to stop was found abandoned in Chattanooga, Tenn., a day after the slaying. Authorities said Wetzel's fingerprints were found in the car. Officers in California said Wetzel wouldn't admit he had been in

Negro Admits Stabbing Youth On Houston Bus

HOUSTON, Jan. 10 (UP)—A 28-year-old Negro maid admitted today that it was she — and not a Negro man — who stabbed a 16-year-old white boy aboard a crowded city bus Wednesday.

The maid, Mrs. Ruthie Lee Jenkins, was charged with assault to murder in the stabbing of David Wilson Taylor, of Cleveland, Tex. Taylor was in good condition in a Houston hospital from a wound in the stomach.

The woman said she stabbed the white youth with a six-inch-long letter opener because he swung at her. She said she surrendered to police last night "because I knew I couldn't live with myself if I didn't."

The trouble started when Taylor refused to let a Negro girl sit beside him on the bus, on which most of the passengers were Negroes. An argument started and Taylor was stabbed.

The Negro maid said she was sitting to the rear of the bus, cleaning her fingernails with the letter opener. She said she rushed to the front when the trouble started.

"When I got there this boy swung his closed fist at me. I ducked back and then he kicked me in the shins. I swung at him blindly with the letter opener."

She said the boy then began fighting with a Negro man and the bus driver broke it up.

"That bus driver knew from the beginning that there was going to be trouble and yet he did nothing."

Underpass Plans Denied By Official

Carlisle said he knew of the request made by the Monroe City Council for an estimate on the construction of an underpass. However, he said the department did not commit itself to the city.

He explained that the estimate was made, but said he could not recall the amount.

"I don't know of any definite plans of any type concerning an underpass, nor do I know if an agreement has been reached on any improvement," Carlisle said.

Carlisle was present at a Baton Rouge meeting when Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard and a group of Monroe citizens discussed proposals for the federal highway and various other improvements in the city.

He also has attended several meetings in Monroe. He will attend the public highway meeting here January 28th.

Unofficial Discussion

Carlisle said improvements concerning various state routes in Monroe would be discussed "unofficially" at the January 28th meeting.

"Right now, our plans are primarily concerned with the interstate highway," Carlisle said.

In an interview Thursday, Wayne Hucksby, district engineer, said slips for construction of the underpass on South Second had not gone past the "estimate stage. He said the underpass was not "justifiable" at that point.

Mayor Howard said yesterday that the City Council proposed the South Second underpass following a meeting in Baton Rouge with highway officials.

"As a result of these talks in Baton Rouge," Howard declared, "it was the understanding of city officials that under normal circumstances, the city, the state and the railroad would join in financing such a project."

"It was on this basis of understanding that the city proceeded to propose construction of the S. Second street underpass," he said.

"Many people on the southside of Monroe have told me since the December 17th capital bond issue that they voted against the issue because they had been led to believe the state would build the S. Second street railway underpass and would pay for it in full," Howard stated.

"These people have told me and other members of the city council that construction of the S. Second street underpass was fully a state responsibility, and as a result, they saw no reason to burden the property owners of Monroe with the proportionate cost of such a project when the state of Louisiana had admitted full responsibility," he added.

Hucksby told a reporter Thursday that he felt the underpass should be built in the Plum street vicinity. Underpasses on both S. Second and Plum were proposed in the bond issue.

In commenting on Hucksby's statement concerning Plum street, Howard said that in the event such a project was undertaken, the total cost would fall upon the taxpayers of Monroe and the railroad, since Plum street is not a state route and therefore, the state would have no expense or effort involved.

Ensminger continued that the object was "glowing like a star—flickering and changing in a red round circle."

Mrs. Ensminger, who also saw the object said she "wanted everybody to know we are all church people—half Baptist and half Methodist—and cold sober."

Ray Young, entomologist, said "when I first saw it, it was about 70 degrees up in the western sky and seemed to be traveling very erratically toward the northeast and was flickering."

"I watched it for three or four minutes and it looked like it burst into balls of fire—one appeared to be falling and one remained in its course."

He said the object that was falling burst into two particles again and then everything faded away, only to be followed by two more flaring bursts.

Altogether, six white persons and several Negroes reported the object which remained in view for 10-15 minutes.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration at Monroe had no explanation other than that a Fort Worth-bound passenger plane was due over the area at about the time.

The CAA said it was possible that lights from the plane could have reflected on low-hanging clouds. It said clouds were 6,000 feet in Monroe about the time.

But a CAA official said that was just a remote possibility and that "it sounds like something else to me."

The woman explained that Clifton, along with his brother Claude, 16, was building fence when the accident occurred. She said that the boys snapped the taut wire causing it to whip — lash.

smaller one and the big red object disappeared.

"They went straight down and faded out. The original object looked about two or three times the size of the evening star."

Church People

Ensminger continued that the object was "glowing like a star—flickering and changing into a red round circle."

Mrs. Ensminger, who also saw the object said she "wanted everybody to know we are all church people—half Baptist and half Methodist—and cold sober."

Ray Young, entomologist, said "when I first saw it, it was about 70 degrees up in the western sky and seemed to be traveling very erratically toward the northeast and was flickering."

"I watched it for three or four minutes and it looked like it burst into balls of fire—one appeared to be falling and one remained in its course."

He said the object that was falling burst into two particles again and then everything faded away, only to be followed by two more flaring bursts.

Altogether, six white persons and several Negroes reported the object which remained in view for 10-15 minutes.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration at Monroe had no explanation other than that a Fort Worth-bound passenger plane was due over the area at about the time.

The CAA said it was possible that lights from the plane could have reflected on low-hanging clouds. It said clouds were 6,000 feet in Monroe about the time.

But a CAA official said that was just a remote possibility and that "it sounds like something else to me."

In questioning the value of agreements with Russia, Dulles recalled that the 1955 summit meeting in Geneva agreed upon the unification of Germany through free elections. He said the Russians promptly reneged on this agreement.

Before any new summit meeting is held, he said, the Russians must give "reasonable assurance that it will accomplish some desirable result." He said a conference—or in an agreement in words only—would have "very undesirable consequences."

Dulles said he was not opposed to new efforts to ease East-West tensions by negotiations with the Russians through regular diplomatic channels.

Boy, 9, Suffers Injury To Eye

A severed barbed wire flew through the air lacerating the left eye of a 9-year-old Mangham boy yesterday. His mother said doctors feared sight was destroyed.

Clifton E. Nobles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nobles was reported by his mother as resting well at St. Francis Hospital last night.

The woman explained that Clifton, along with his brother Claude, 16, was building fence when the accident occurred. She said the boys snapped the taut wire causing it to whip — lash.

But Downs said the Public Safety Department sought to revoke Mrs. Crooks' license and her husband's auto license plate unless the family can prove ability to pay for damages to Guzman's car.

Downs termed this phase of the investigation "ridiculous," and said the Crooks case is not the most inequitable he has seen.

The Public Safety Department notified Mrs. Crooks, her attorney said, that the fact that Guzman was convicted of negligent homicide did not relieve the Crooks family of responsibility.

he — was evidence of this country's increasing capability to test-fire the weapons it is striving to bring into mass production for its operational forces around the globe.

It proved that the test center is no "one-shot institution," for it was the first time that two huge missiles ever had been fired in such close proximity.

The distance the three-stage Atlas flew today probably was about 600 miles, the same range covered by another Atlas last Dec. 17 in the first successful test of the weapon. Two earlier shots ended in failure when the missiles strayed off course and were destroyed soon after leaving the ground.

No effort to shoot the 100-ton Atlas over its full range is expected until late this year.

The Atlas was a thing of awesome power when it rose skyward this hazy day, its tail a massive ball of orange flame.

Solon Scores Generalities In Ike's Talk

Fifth District Congressman Otto E. Passman, convalescing here after a heart attack in December, said Ike's State of the Union message dealt in a "preponderance of generalities and platitudes."

Passman admitted that he was encouraged from "the fact that the President has found the courage finally to acknowledge some of the grave errors" of the present administration, and to "commit himself at last to a realistic facing up to the situation and toward working effectively to solve the problems."

The Congressman was in full approval of a statement by Eisenhower in which the president feels the country should handle more of its aid to foreign nations through the Export-Import Bank and through private investors in the U. S.

Passman said this was what he had always favored.

Passman's office quoted him as giving "strong endorsement" to the President's desire for a five-year extension of the reciprocal trade program.

"What we need very much," he said, "is much more trade, and much less aid."

His offices said the Congressman should return to his Washington post in mid-February.

Louisville Signals

Considerable concern is being expressed by Monroe citizens over a proposed new traffic light system for Louisville avenue, in which no provision has been made for controlled left turns. The system has been designed and is being installed by representatives of the state highway department, since state and national highways through the city are not controlled by the cities.

There are some who fear that traffic along all of Louisville may reach a situation comparable to that at which Louisville intersects with DeSiard street. Powell avenue and the Sterlington road at the point known as "the Tower." There the situation might be described as "confusion compounded," since there is no way of indicating when traffic from any street should proceed and it becomes a matter of letting the one who feels the luckiest start first.

District Highway Engineer Wayne H. Huckaby has stated that a system to cost $19,464.96 has been designed by a "team of specialists." The engineer said he had expected that the "specialists" would make provision for controlled left turns at some points on Louisville. He stated that the "specialists" apparently did not hold the same views. Of course, there is the possibility that the need for such provision did not occur to these men and that they would have made the provision if it had been suggested to them.

The outstanding traffic control light in the Twin Cities is that located at the intersection of Trenton and Bridge streets in West Monroe. At the end of the north traffic bridge. This light makes provision for left turns toward downtown West Monroe by delaying the east-bound traffic a little longer than the west-bound traffic. There is a period in which there is no interference with traffic turning to the left. There is also a provision for a right turn onto the bridge for vehicles traveling north at a time when this traffic cannot proceed northward across the intersection. Waiting periods for vehicles traveling eastward are a little longer but there is no confusion. Each driver knows when it is time to move and he knows he can move forward in an orderly fashion.

Under the present situation on Louisville avenue the driver who plans to make a left turn faces a bad situation and so do all the drivers behind him. The driver who wants to turn left must enter the intersection on a green light and then must wait until that light turns red before he can make the turn. This means that all cars behind him must wait for the next green light and it also means that only one car can turn left for each light change, no matter how many wish to turn left.

Thus each driver is constantly confronted with a bad choice. If he chooses the traffic lane next to the curb he must travel behind trucks and other slow-moving vehicles, since these vehicles usually take the extreme right lane in order to allow faster-traveling cars to pass on the left. If he chooses the lane next to the center on his side of the street he is constantly trapped by cars wanting to make left turns. This situation would be largely avoided if provision were made for controlled left turns.

Traffic on Louisville avenue, as well as other streets, is a matter of grave concern for the Monroe police department, since the police are responsible for traffic violations and for keeping traffic moving in an orderly fashion.

Although the state necessarily has some control over its highways and should make as much provision as possible for rapid passage of through traffic, there seem to be many good reasons for cooperation between state officials and the city traffic department.

Controlled left turns undoubtedly would be far superior to the haphazard system that would result if left turns are allowed and no provision is made for their control. Abandonment of left turns also probably would not be good for the reason that each car wishing to make a left turn would be forced to enter the street twice instead of once, thus increasing the volume of traffic.

It would have been easy to have installed left turn signals in the system now being installed. Although controlled left turns are not the full solution to the turning problem on Louisville, they would have improved conditions tremendously. This could have been done by installing only two left turn signals on Louisville and prohibiting left turns at the other intersections.

According to some experts, about the only thing that the system now being installed will do is to speed the flow of traffic to a degree. Certainly, this is an improvement. But couldn't this have been done by modifying the old system? If so, several thousands of dollars could have been saved.

As of now, it would appear the system now being installed will do little to improve traffic conditions on Louisville.

Reds 'Gone To Pot'?

For some time disgruntled leaders of the opposing factions of the Communist party in the United States have been making liberal use of the "crying towel." They have bewailed the woes besetting their party, including alleged huge losses in membership, lack of funds and disagreement among the leaders.

There has been a considerable tendency to discount these moans on the theory that the reds were trying to conceal their actual strength and were attempting to bring about a complacent attitude on the part of those who have fought communism the hardest. There is always reason to be suspicious of any group committed to a policy of conquering by infiltration.

Now, however, there is actual evidence that this party is practically on the rocks financially. The Daily Worker, principal mouth-piece of the disension-ridden U. S. Communist party, will suspend publication on its 34th anniversary next Monday.

The Worker, whose editor had been under fire by both the Moscow-linked faction and the party's American politburo, which favors independence for the party in this country, said the high party command had refused financial aid for the paper. The Communists had made a last-ditch appeal for financial contributions to keep it alive. This probably hastened the demise of the Daily Worker, since no one is anxious to bet aboard a sinking ship.

Circulation was reported to have dropped from a peak of 40,000 to 50,000 daily in the 1930's to a low point of about 7,200. It was reported the weekend Worker which now has a circulation of about 13,000 compared to a former 100,000, will be continued.

The party has admitted that the U. S. Communist movement has lost 60,000 members in the last 10 years, 7,000 of them in 1957, and claims a present membership of about 10,000.

As stated before, the Communists may be trying to minimize their membership in order to allay the tremendous campaign that has been carried on against them since the end of World War II. Nevertheless, the financial status of any organization is usually a fairly accurate barometer. It can show how the wind is blowing.

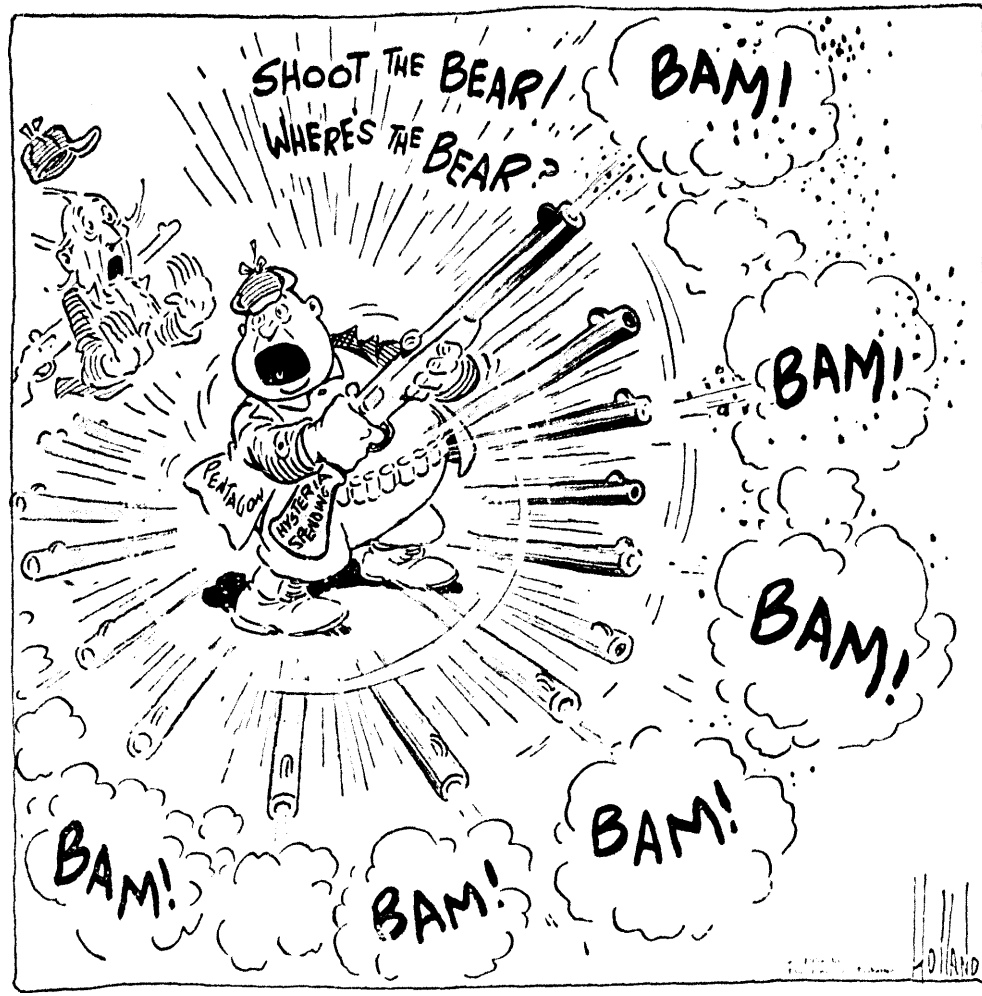

At one time the Communist party was regarded by some as merely a political party. Since Russia has become the principal threat to the freedom of the world and since Communism is a Russian product and is directed from Russia, it has come to be generally regarded in the United States as the party of traitors and subversives. This could go a long way toward accounting for its decreased popularity.

Another reason is that communism thrives best on poverty and discontent. In the last 10 years the party has not been able to find enough of either of these to hold its own, much less to grow in strength.

Continuation of the present campaign may succeed in completely wiping out the party in the United States. It has surely done a good job in clipping the reds' wings in this country.

Eisenhower Talk Clarifies Foreign Policy Of U.S.

President Eisenhower's State of the Union message indicates there is a good chance that United States foreign policy is coming out of the dark woods at last.

The President said — and said forcefully — many things which had to be spelled out to get the cold war into proper focus.

The President's review suggests that American policy makers — a year almost to the day from the promulgation of the Eisenhower Doctrine — have been taking a thoughtful look at the facts of life in an era of unrelenting cold war.

It indicates a recognition of the probability that despite Sputniks, missiles and armaments in general, the East-West military standoff persists and the decisive battles of the cold war still must be fought in the economic and political arenas.

The President kept his eye on the nation's defense requirements in his message, but he appeared to concentrate on military strength. For if we did this, the future would hold nothing for the world but an age of terror," he said.

The nation, said the President, must "become so preoccupied with our desire for military strength that we neglect those areas of economic development, trade, diplomacy, education, ideas and principles where the action reacted against the United States in that area, and resulted in a further political setback for the Americans.

This year's Eisenhower message is likely to be far more acceptable to the Middle East and other areas which, struggling to build decent economies, dread the heavy emphasis on military responses to the Soviet threat.

The President's vow to wage "total peace," coupled with his appeal for the continuation and strengthening of the foreign aid program, will make a great deal more sense to the people of the East. An American policy closely geared to the President's general outlines can offer a hope that the so-called "neutral" world can be rescued.

It can offer, too, a chance for the United States to seize and hold the cold war initiative by bringing great challenges to the door of the Kremlin and demanding Soviet performance.

Louisiana Tax Take Continues To Reach Higher

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 10 (AP) — Louisiana tax collections continued to climb in December compared to the same month last year but the increase was almost exactly in line with revenue estimates.

State revenue collector James Reilly reported today total collections by his department for the first six months of fiscal 1958 were $174,830,089, only $363,539 above his estimates.

However, he said, this represented a $12,414,878 increase over the same period in the previous fiscal year.

The December total of $17,187,672 was $390,216 over the same month in 1956.

Taxes showing the largest increases for December compared to December, 1956, were sales, up $22,361,764; income, up $228,290; corporation franchise, up $125,438; and gasoline, up $122,541.

The largest single decline by a wide margin was $306,538 in income tax collections for December.

For the six month period major increases in tax revenues compared with the first half of fiscal 1957 were corporation franchise, up $1,278,306; gas gathering, up $1,300,980; gasoline, up $1,089,614; sales, up $3,965,413; severance, up $2,512,832; and tobacco, up $717,977.

BETTER LATE, ETC. SYRACUSE, N.Y. — (UP) — District Director Alva M. Myers of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service said he figured someone was trying to ease his conscience when he slipped an envelope into the service offices. Inside the unmarked envelope was $1,000 in cash and a note which read, "For back taxes."

DR. CRANE SAYS

All Professions Hit By Jealousy

As Prof. De Voto grew more popular with his Northwestern University students, his teaching colleagues became more hostile. Why? Was it for the same reason that the old High Priests tried to sabotage the enthusiastic preaching of the young Galilean named Jesus? Scraperhook this case, for similar jealousy arises in all professions.

Case W-396: Bernard de Voto deserves a posthumous accolade for his superb teaching of English at Northwestern University.

Since I minored in English for my Ph.D. at Northwestern, I had taken most of the courses listed in our English Department, including several on short-story writing.

De Voto was not teaching when I studied short story writing, but some of my friends later enrolled in his courses.

And he was so popular that his classes overflowed. For De Voto was a successful writer even at that time. His short stories were then appearing almost every month in Saturday Evening Post and other slick paper magazines.

He would thus give his students the original manuscript of one of his stories and let them contrast it with the final printed version. Then, step by step, he would show them exactly why he had changed a word or sentence or rewritten an entire paragraph to improve the original draft.

Naturally, the students devoured this practical teaching by a man who was already selling his stories to the top markets. For he could practice what he preached!

Jealous Professions But De Voto didn't win a popularity award with the faculty, although the students flocked into his classes.

Indeed, the more the students liked him, the more he was damned by faint praise and figuratively knifed behind the back by some of his colleagues.

Jealousy grew so great that I was told he was coldly informed he might as well resign for he would never be promoted to a full professorship.

And that is still one of the tragic situations on many a college campus. As soon as a young man becomes a superlatively good teacher and the students begin to request enrollment in his courses, the older professors may try to belittle him.

For example, one of our best psychology professors at Northwestern University was the late John J. B. Morgan, an authority in Child Psychology and author of many textbooks.

Dr. Morgan was an enthusiastic teacher with missionary zeal. He tried to inject classroom demonstrations to perk up the interest of his classes.

For example, he would take his students in Abnormal Psychology on visits to various state institutions.

He would demonstrate hypnosis in class and post-hypnotic suggestion. Yet his students had to study just as hard as those in other courses.

But other faculty members began to decide Dr. Morgan was a "sensationalizer" and a "quack." They affected a superior air, though they were much inferior as teachers, and suggested that Dr. Morgan was "not scientific" because his courses were so popular on our Evanston campus.

Teacher Feuds Meanwhile, I had large classes on our downtown Northwestern University campus. For I used the same superlative educational methods that Dr. Morgan employed.

We both worked hard to make every lecture an interesting, dramatic event. And we tied psychology into the practical everyday life of the student.

Thus, I used written "Case Records" as homework assignments. They proved so popular that President Walter Dill Scott finally urged me to put them into newspaper format so the majority of Americans could see them.

And that's how this daily newspaper column happened to develop. But I was meanwhile criticized behind my back, as were De Voto and Dr. Morgan.

But I know from first hand data that De Voto and Morgan were two of the greatest classroom teachers Northwestern ever had, and no human being can give them this belated public acclaim.

Alas, both of them are dead. But you can still find their type of zealous teacher on every campus today. Would that there were more of them!

U.S. Budget Is Slipping Into Red

The United States budget is slipping into the red RIGHT NOW — no matter what the President says in his budget message Monday and no matter what he does or tries to do in the months ahead.

I'm not talking just about the new budget the President is about to submit — the budget that will cover the 1959 fiscal year to start July 1, 1958, and to end in mid-1959.

I'm also talking about the "old" budget under which we have been operating since last July and which has less than six months to go.

It was only three months ago that President Eisenhower revised the budget for this current year, came up with the estimate that when the budget books are closed this coming July, the Government will show a surplus of $1.5 billion.

But it will now be a financial miracle if this year's budget really ends in a surplus and the President is able to boast of his third balanced budget in a row. I see no financial miracles on the horizon.

For spending is running hundreds of millions of dollars ahead of the estimates of less than 100 days ago because of hikes in defense spending and in non-defense spending too.

Receipts are running hundreds of millions of dollars behind the President's October estimates because the deepening business recession is cutting into wages, salaries, corporation profits, and when total wages, salaries and profits go down, taxes go down as well.

In short, the 1958 budget is being battered from the outside and from the inside. It doesn't take much of this sort of battering to turn a slim $1.5 billion surplus into a deficit.

It would seem to me that we would be in much better shape to evaluate properly the meaning of an imminent deficit in the budget if we were prepared in advance for the news. Apparently, though, this is not the view at the top level in Washington. What I'm writing here is not likely to be officially confirmed in the near future and it may be flatly denied.

But coming events do cast their shadows before. And the shadows of the budget are increasingly an-parent to those who will bother to peer beneath the figures in the press releases. To be specific, that spending in the 12 months between July 1, 1957, and July 1, 1958, would approximate $72 billion.

Military spending alone is running $700 million to $800 million over the October projections; other spending is pushing higher too. When the books are closed next June 30, the probability is spending in this year will have come close to $73 billion.

The President in October said that receipts in the 12 month period to end in mid-1958 would approximate $73.5 billion.

It simply won't turn out that way, and not all the juggling by all the master jugglers will be able to make it turn out that way. For corporations are making less money than was anticipated in October, and so they'll be paying less taxes than was estimated. Individuals are earning less in wages and salaries than was expected, and so the tax take from them won't be up to the estimates. And although total income is being padded by increased payments in unemployment compensation and social security benefits, people getting old-age and social security benefits do not pay taxes on these funds.

When the books are closed next June 30, the probability is receipts in this year will have come only to about $72.4 billion.

The President in October used his estimates to forecast a surplus in the current fiscal year of $1.5 billion. Substitute my estimates — and they're conservative, they're based on interviews with highly informed sources in and out of Government — and you get the opposite of a surplus. You get a deficit ranging from over a half billion to a billion or more.

In his message Monday, the President is slated to submit a budget balanced on paper for 1959; so presumably he'll stick by his forecast of a budget balanced for 1958.

A friend is one who really should be... Be always tried and true... But do not ever ask of him... To tell a lie for you... He cannot be your honest friend... And at the same time be... The one who would defend you with... His own dishonesty... For if he does not speak the truth... What ever time or place... Eventually he may bestow... A mutual disgrace... It is a faithless loyalty... If it involves a lie... Yes, even when to save someone... Who is about to die... No friend is ever worth your while... Unless his tongue is true... Eisenhower Talk Clarifies Foreign Policy Of U.S.

President Eisenhower's State of the Union message indicates there is a good chance that United States foreign policy is coming out of the dark woods at last. The President said — and said forcefully — many things which had to be spelled out to get the cold war into proper focus.

The President's review suggests that American policy makers — a year almost to the day from the promulgation of the Eisenhower Doctrine — have been taking a thoughtful look at the facts of life in an era of unrelenting cold war. It indicates a recognition of the probability that despite Sputniks, missiles and armaments in general, the East-West military standoff persists and the decisive battles of the cold war still must be fought in the economic and political arenas. The President kept his eye on the nation's defense requirements in his message, but he appeared to be cautioning against a national stampede.

"We could make no more tragic mistake than merely to concentrate on military strength. For if we did this, the future would hold nothing for the world but an age of terror," he said.

The nation, said the President, must "never become so preoccupied with our desire for military strength that we neglect those areas of economic development, trade, diplomacy, education, ideas and principles where the foundations of peace must be laid."

With the Russians throwing all their energy into "total cold war," the President cautioned: "The nonmilitary drive, if underestimated, could defeat the free world, regardless of our military strength. This danger is all the greater because many of us fail or refuse to recognize it."

These are forthright words. United States policy has erred in this respect in recent years. The President showed a willingness to concede some errors of judgment. If this means there has been some soul-searching going on among American policy makers, then the country has reason to be reassured.

If there is an economic war ahead, then the United States must use its economic weapons with more effectiveness than the Communists are using theirs. Thus, the President says, investments in security and peace through economic aid to friendly nations cannot be called giveaways.

"We cannot afford to have one of our most essential security programs shut down with a slogan," he said.

Just a year ago this week the President announced his Eisenhower Doctrine in the wake of a near-war crisis in the Middle East, which even now is the most sensitive area of the global cold war. Its strong emphasis on military action reacted against the United States in that area, and resulted in a further political setback for the Americans.

This year's Eisenhower message is likely to be far more acceptable to the Middle East and other areas which, struggling to build decent economies, dread the heavy emphasis on military responses to the Soviet threat.

The President's vow to wage "total peace," coupled with his appeal for the continuation and strengthening of the foreign aid program, will make a great deal more sense to the people of the East. An American policy closely geared to the President's general outlines can offer a hope that sagging United States fortunes in the so-called "neutral" world can be rescued.

It can offer, too, a chance for the United States to seize and hold the cold war initiative by bringing great challenges to the door of the Kremlin and demanding Soviet performance.

Louisiana Tax Take Continues To Reach Higher

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 10 (AP) — Louisiana tax collections continued to climb in December compared to the same month last year but the increase was almost exactly in line with revenue estimates.

State revenue collector James Rely reported today total collections by his department for the first six months of fiscal 1958 were $174,830,089, only $363,539 above his estimates.

However, he said, this represented a $12,414,878 increase over the same period in the previous fiscal year.

The December total of $17,187,672 was $390,216 over the same month in 1956.

Taxes showing the largest increases for December compared to December, 1956, were sales, up $292,363; tobacco, up $228,290; corporation franchise, up $125,438; and gasoline, up $122,541.

The largest single decline by a wide margin was $306,538 in income tax collections for December. The December total of $17,187,672 was $390,216 over the same month in 1956.

Ironically, the first American to make this mistake was Woodrow Wilson, a professor of history, who should have known better. Our American heaving and shoving on Europeans to unite is not good. No body loves a pushy matchmaker.

DR. CRANE SAYS

All Professions Hit By Jealousy

As Prof. De Voto grew more popular with his Northwestern University students, his teaching colleagues became more hostile. Why? Was it for the same reason that the old High Priests tried to sabotage the enthusiastic preaching of the young Galilean named Jesus? Scrapbook this case, for similar jealousy arises in all professions.

Case W-396: Bernard de Voto deserves a posthumous accolade for his superb teaching of English at Northwestern University.

Since I minored in English for my Ph.D. at Northwestern, I had taken most of the courses listed in our English Department, including several on short-story writing.

De Voto was not teaching when I studied short story writing, but some of my friends later enrolled in his courses.

And he was so popular that his classes overflowed. For De Voto was a successful writer even at that time. His short stories were then appearing almost every month in Saturday Evening Post and other slick paper magazines.

He would thus give his students the original manuscript of one of his stories and let them contrast it with the final printed version.

Then, step by step, he would show them exactly why he had changed a word or sentence or rewritten an entire paragraph to improve the original draft.

Naturally, the students devoured this practical teaching by a man who was already selling his stories to the top markets. For he could practice what he preached!

Jealous Professors But De Voto didn't win a popularity award with the faculty, although the students flocked into his classes.

Indeed, the more the students liked him, the more he was damned by faint praise and figuratively knifed behind the back by some of his colleagues.

Jealousy grew so great that I was told he was coldly informed he might as well resign for he would never be promoted to a full professorship.

And that is still one of the tragic situations on many a college campus. As soon as a young man becomes a superlatively good teacher and the students begin to request enrollment in his courses, the older professors may try to belittle him.

For example, one of our best slipping into the red RIGHT NOW — no matter what the President says in his budget message Monday and no matter what he does or tries to do in the months ahead.

I'm not talking just about the new budget the President is about to submit — the budget that will cover the 1959 fiscal year to start July 1, 1958, and to end in mid-1959.

I'm also talking about the "old" budget under which we have been operating since last July and which has less than six months to go.

It was only three months ago that President Eisenhower revised the budget for this current year, came up with the estimate that when the budget books are closed this coming July, the Government will show a surplus of $1.5 billion.

But it will now be a financial miracle if this year's budget really ends in a surplus and the President is able to boast of his third balanced budget in a row. I see no financial miracles on the horizon.

For spending is running hundreds of millions of dollars ahead of the estimates of less than 100 days ago because of hikes in defense spending and in non-defense spending too.

Receipts are running hundreds of millions of dollars behind the President's October estimates because the deepening business recession is cutting into wages, salaries, corporation profits. And when total wages, salaries and profits go down, taxes go down as well.

In short, the 1958 budget is being battered from the outside and from the inside. It doesn't take much of this sort of battering to turn a slim $1.5 billion surplus into a deficit.

It would seem to me that we would be in much better shape to evaluate properly the meaning of an imminent deficit in the budget if we were prepared in advance for the news. Apparently, though, this is not the view at the top level in Washington. What I'm writing here is not likely to be officially confirmed in the near future and it may be flatly denied.

But coming events do cast their shadows before. And the shadows of the budget are increasingly ap-psychology professors at Northwestern University was the late John J. B. Morgan, an authority in Child Psychology and author of many textbooks.

Dr. Morgan was an enthusiastic teacher with missionary zeal. He tried to inject classroom demonstrations to perk up the interest of his classes.

For example, he would take his students in Abnormal Psychology on visits to various state institutions.

He would demonstrate hypnosis in class and post-hypnotic suggestion. Yet his students had to study just as hard as those in other courses.

But other faculty members began to deride Dr. Morgan as a "sensationalizer" and a "quack." They affected a superior air, though they were much inferior as teachers, and suggested that Dr. Morgan was "not scientific" because his courses were so popular on our Evanston campus.

Teacher Feuds Meanwhile, I had large classes on our downtown Northwestern University campus, for I used the same superlative educational methods that Dr. Morgan employed.

We both worked hard to make every lecture an interesting, dramatic event. And we tied psychology into the practical everyday life of the student.

Thus, I used written "Case Records" as homework assignments. They proved so popular that President Walter Dill Scott finally urged me to put them into newspaper format so the majority of Americans could see them.

And that's how this daily newspaper column happened to develop. But I was meanwhile criticized behind my back, as were De Voto and Dr. Morgan.

But I know from first hand data that De Voto and Morgan were two of the greatest classroom teachers Northwestern ever had, and am happy to give them this belated public acclaim.

Alas, both of them are dead. But you can still find their type of zealous teacher on every campus today. Would that there were more of them!

U.S. Budget Is Slipping Into Red

The United States budget is slipping into the red RIGHT NOW — no matter what the President says in his budget message Monday and no matter what he does or tries to do in the months ahead.

I'm not talking just about the new budget the President is about to submit — the budget that will cover the 1959 fiscal year to start July 1, 1958, and to end in mid-1959.

I'm also talking about the "old" budget under which we have been operating since last July and which has less than six months to go.

It was only three months ago that President Eisenhower revised the budget for this current year, came up with the estimate that when the budget books are closed this coming July, the Government will show a surplus of $1.5 billion.

But it will now be a financial miracle if this year's budget really ends in a surplus and the President is able to boast of his third balanced budget in a row. I see no financial miracles on the horizon.

For spending is running hundreds of millions of dollars ahead of the estimates of less than 100 days ago because of hikes in defense spending and in non-defense spending too.

Receipts are running hundreds of millions of dollars behind the President's October estimates because the deepening business recession is cutting into wages, salaries, corporation profits. And when total wages, salaries and profits go down, taxes go down as well.

In short, the 1958 budget is being battered from the outside and from the inside. It doesn't take much of this sort of battering to turn a slim $1.5 billion surplus into a deficit.

It would seem to me that we would be in much better shape to evaluate properly the meaning of an imminent deficit in the budget if we were prepared in advance for the news. Apparently, though, this is not the view at the top level in Washington. What I'm writing here is not likely to be officially confirmed in the near future and it may be flatly denied.

But coming events do cast their shadows before. And the shadows of the budget are increasingly apparent to those who will bother to peer beneath the figures in the press releases. To be specific: that spending in the 12 months between July 1, 1957, and July 1, 1958, would approximate $72 billion.

Military spending alone is running $700 million to $800 million over the October projections; other spending is pushing higher too.

When the books are closed next June 30, the probability is spending in this year will have come close to $73 billion.

The President in October said that receipts in the 12 month period to end in mid-1958 would approximate $73.5 billion.

It simply won't turn out that way, and not all the juggling by all the master jugglers will be able to make it turn out that way. For corporations are making less money than was anticipated in October, and so they'll be paying less taxes than was estimated. Individuals are earning less in wages and salaries than was expected, and so the tax take from them won't be up to the estimates. (And although total income is being padded by increased payments in unemployment compensation and social security benefits, people getting jobless and social security benefits do not pay taxes on these funds.)

When the books are closed next June 30, the probability is receipts in this year will have come only to about $72.4 billion.

The President in October used his estimates to forecast a surplus in the current fiscal year of $1.5 billion.

Substitute my estimates — and they're conservative, they're based on interviews with highly informed sources in and out of Government — and you get the opposite of a surplus. You get a deficit ranging from over a half billion to a billion or more.

In his message Monday, the President is slated to submit a budget, balanced on paper for 1959; so presumably he'll stick by his forecast of a budget balanced for 1958.

NO ACTION TAKEN — FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UP) — College football coaches asked the National Collegiate Athletic Association today for a partial return to the days of two-platoon football.

The request, laid before the NCAA Football Rules Committee, asked that coaches be permitted to send a player back into a game once during a period regardless of whether he started the quarter. Present rules permit only those players who started a quarter to be returned to action in the same period.

Lon Little, former Columbia University coach, headed a delegation from the American Football Coaches Association (AFCA), which presented the request and four others for minor changes in the football rules. Appearing with Little were Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma and Cornell's Lefty James.

There was no indication when the NCAA Rules Committee, headed by Michigan's H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, would act. The committee sessions were closed to the public.

In addition to relaxing the current limited substitution rule, the college group asked:

That the team which kicks off out of bounds two times in a row be penalized five yards. Currently the penalty is not stepped off until a team makes three kick offs out of bounds.

That players ineligible to receive passes be permitted down field after the ball crosses the line of scrimmage.

That an interior lineman, who for some reason is moved to an end position, would be considered

Senior Bowl Offering 80 Of Nation's Grid Heroes

By STAN ATKINS

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 10 (P) — Leading college players of the nation are matched in tomorrow's ninth annual Senior Bowl, where numerous professional football stars embarked on their paid careers in past years.

The pro scouts, who have watched the 20-man squads working out this week, say a good number of this year's players should go on to win their spots in the pro field.

More than 80 players who got their first pro play in the Senior Bowl were on the rosters of National Football League clubs during the past season. Still others were with Canadian professional teams.

The Rebels, who won last year have a 3-3 edge in the series and South Coach Paul Brown of the Cleveland Browns has five wins in the six years he has coached either of the squads. Brown is back for his seventh coaching effort here. North Coach Joe Kuharich of the Washington Redskins has five.

The squads include 15 members of the Associated Press All-American squads and 30 players who already have been drafted in the pro draft.

The scouts will be closely watching the other 20, including Ray Brown, Mississippi quarterback, who were passed over in the early rounds of the draft.

Brown said the Mississippians of the Senior Bowl victory over Texas, undoubtedly will be snapped up in an early round when the draft is resumed. Brown plans to use him mainly on defense and call on Arkansas' George Walker for offensive duties at quarterback.

MAYBE $125,000

Williams To Draw Highest Salary In History Of Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10 (UP)—Ted Williams, the American League's batting king, the Associated Press' male athlete of the year and baseball's best gate attraction, will not only be back with the Boston Red Sox next season but he'll be drawing down the highest salary ever paid to a player in the history of the game. The 39-year-old slugger, who enjoyed one of the greatest years of his long and brilliant career during the 1957 season, is expected to sign a contract that could bring him as much as $125,000 in 1958. That's an increase of $25,000 over what he earned last year. The contract will include several bonus clauses based on attendance, just as in '57.

The signing ceremony will take place in Fenway Park early next month when baseball's No. 1 hitter is scheduled to arrive in Boston to fulfill his agreement to appear in the annual sportsman's show.

Williams, who has been dividing his time this winter between fishing off the Florida keys and Puerto Rico, and running his fishing tackle business in Miami, understandably enough did not wish to discuss his new contract.

He emphasized, however, that he never has had any salary difficulties with owner Tom Yawkey and he did not anticipate any this time either. For a super star, Ted always has been one of the easiest to sign. He never has been a holdout.

"The Red Sox have always treated me fairly," the tall fence-buster said. "That's one of the reasons I've always been grateful that I came up with them and that's why I have always said that I intend to finish out my baseball career in Boston."

A decisive factor in Williams' overwhelming choice of the 214 sports writers and sportscasters as the nation's outstanding athlete was his remarkable .388 average, the highest figure reached by a major league batter since he, himself, hit .405 in 1941. At 39, he was the oldest ever to win a batting crown.

Ted received 65 first-place votes for a total of 434 points to easily outdistance his rivals. Milwaukee's Lew Burdette, who defeated the Yankees three times in the Braves' World Series triumph last October, was second with 54 first-place votes and 226 points. Carmen Basilio, who whipped Ray Robinson for the middleweight title last September, was third with 17 first-place votes and 113 points.

Mickey Mantle of the Yankees, winner of the AP's male athlete of the year poll for 1956, finished in the tie for 13th this year. Mantle, who edged Williams as the American League's most valuable player for 1957, received only one first-place vote and 14 points.

Points were awarded on a basis of three for first, two for second and one for third.

"I am very proud to have been singled out for this award," Williams said. "I want to thank the Associated Press and all those who made it possible. It is a great honor and I am deeply appreciative."

Williams, a firm believer in setting personal goals before each campaign, already has set his sights on the following for the 1958 season:

A .330 batting average, at least 100 games, 25 to 30 home runs and 100 runs batted in.

These are practically the same aims he had last spring. He not only exceeded his batting wish by more than 30 points in '57, but he participated in 132 games and smashed 38 home runs. He fell short of his RBI goal, driving in 87 runs, but that was due to a combination of things — an illness which kept him out of the line-up for three weeks near the end of the season, inability of the batters who preceded him to get on base with any semblance of regularity and 119 bases on balls.

A firm believer in keeping in condition all-year-round, the 6-4 Williams currently weighs around 220, some 10 pounds above his normal playing weight. Ted has had very little time for exercise this winter due to an unusually busy winter schedule. He intends to start light training next month.

"I just hope to be in 100 per cent shape when the season opens," Williams said. "My biggest worry is injuries. I've been plagued with one every year. I was very fortunate last year to avoid any injury or serious illness until the very end of the season. If I can be as lucky this year I don't see why I can't have another good season."

Following Williams, Burdette and Basilio in the balloting were: John Crow, Texas A&M, football (67); Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals, baseball (46); Will Chamberlain, Kansas, basketball (42); Dick Meyer, open golf champion (44); Jimmy Brown, Cleveland Browns, football (40); Floyd Patterson, heavyweight boxing champion (34); Bill Russell and Bob Cousy, Boston Celtics, basketball (27 each); Hank Aaron, Milwaukee Braves, baseball (24); Mantle and Lennie Rosenbuth, North Carolina, basketball (14 each). Other athletes had scattered votes.

BOSS IMPRESSED

Billy Martin Signs 1st Detroit Contract

By JACK BERRY
DETROIT, Jan. 10 (UP)—Billy Martin, who was acquired to put some "fire" into the Detroit Tigers, didn't disappoint his new manager Jack Tighe in their first formal meeting today.

"I was greatly impressed by him," Tighe said after Martin signed his 1958 contract following a brief talk with general manager Johnny McFall. Martin, 29, came to Detroit Nov. 20, 1957, in a 13-player trade with the Kansas City Athletics.

Although contract terms were not disclosed, it appeared from McFall's remarks that Martin would receive a bonus after the season if the Tigers do well.

"I told Billy Detroit is starved for a winner," McFall said "and that his earnings possibilities here are unlimited. He said he'd rather sign now instead of floundering around and go on what he does this season."

"I had been told that Billy was a nice fellow—I wasn't expecting some uncouth character to come in because of the bad publicity he's had. And I must say that I was much more impressed than I thought I'd be," Tighe said.

"And," Tighe added with a grateful grin, "he's got desire." Martin talked about his recent Texas hunting trip with Mickey Mantle. "If you miss a deer you can always be sure Mickey will run it down," he said.

When asked if he thought the Tigers looked lackadaisical, Martin hedged a bit and answered: "Any team that doesn't win the pennant looks lackadaisical. If we can help each other out with constructive criticism and a little agitation that'll be fine," he grinned.

"When I started with the Yankees I thought Tommy Henrich (now a Tiger coach) hated me," Martin said. "He kept telling me 'You're fresh.' " Martin said, "I finally found out he was just trying to make a ball player out of me."

Regarding his switch to shortstop in the tentative Tiger starting lineup, Martin said he'll play anywhere "as long as I can play."

"I played shortstop for half a season in Oakland in 1949 and I played some short and third for the Yankees."

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10 (UP)—A 50-1 horse finished second at the Fair Grounds today but was disqualified for causing a spill in the $2,000 sixth race.

Mr. Wilmes, ridden by Lewis Meaux, caused a jam at the eighth pole by bearing in, according to race track stewards. The jam spilled Jockey Anthony Ferrara who was riding Judge Ray K. owned by Henry Forrest of Kentucky.

Ferraro was taken to Mercy Hospital for X-rays and examination, but he was not believed seriously injured.

The horse apparently was not injured in the five-horse jam.

Wright, Pung Leading Way At Sea Island

SEA ISLAND, Ga., Jan. 10 (UP)—Defending champion Mickey Wright and Jackie Pung, a former winner, led the field today in the Sea Island Women's Open invitational tournament with two-under par 74s.

Miss Wright, of San Diego, Calif., who set a record for the 54-hole tournament with a 220 last year, overcame two double bogeys, one on the front nine and one on the tough back nine, to hold her strong challenge in this 54th Sea Island event.

Miss Pung, former national amateur champ from San Francisco, put in her strong bid in the $5,000-purse event also as a former winner. She capped the 1955 win when the tournament was a 36-hole event.

A score of the nation's top women golfers and about 40 amateurs, led by Dale Fleming of Tulsa, with an 80, battled over the tough, 6,136-yard course in chilly weather. The temperature rose to 40 during the afternoon.

Miss Wright went out with a 39 and returned with a 35 while Miss Pung fired an even 37 over both laps of the course. Women's par is 37-39-76.

Archie Moore Suing Spieser For 'Damages'

DETROIT, Jan. 10 (UP)—Archie Moore's managers today filed a $10,000 damage suit in circuit court against light heavyweight Chuck Spieser and his brother, Manager Joe Spieser, charging breach of contract in the proposed Moore-Spieser title match.

Myron H. Savidge, attorney, sent a letter to the Michigan Boxing Commission demanding payment of a $10,000 forfeit and then filed the suit against the Spieser brothers.

Spieser had signed to fight Moore here "sometime in January" and guaranteed him $100,000. But Spieser ran into difficulty raising the money and finding a television sponsor, so nothing was done about fixing a definite date.

Savidge contended that since the total of $100,000 was not deposited Oct. 22, the contract has been breached and the co-managers for the light heavyweight champion, Jack Kearns and Charles Johnston, are entitled to $10,000 as "liquidated damages."

Contract-Jumping Coaches Defended

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (UP)—A football coach who jumps a contract is no more a "Judas" than the college president who signs him to a new job, Ohio State's volatile coach, Woody Hayes, said today.

Hayes appeared before the Executives' Club of Chicago to narrate films of his Buckeyes' 10-7 triumph over Oregon in the Rose Bowl game.

Hayes also received the Chicago football writers' midwest coach-of-the-year award. He made his remark about so-called "Traitors" who are criticized for jumping contracts after stating he and Oklahoma's Bud Wilkinson agreed coaches should do more talking.

"Wilkinson and I talked about this during the recent coaches' meeting in Philadelphia," said Hayes. "It's just like Teddy Roosevelt once said: 'Tell the truth and win the war.'"

"About this contract-breaking business—and I'm not going to leave Ohio State—I don't forget that every time there is such a change, a president accepts a coach he knows is breaking a contract when he comes to his school."

Hayes also said, during his Rose Bowl trip, he "tried to find out what bugged up the Pacific Coast Conference."

"I may be over-simplifying things," he continued "but I probably all starts from big schools who want their own way and little schools who want equal rights and no compromise between them. There have been two or three in the driver's seat completely uncompromising and unbending. We don't want to make that mistake in the Big Ten."

As for the Rose Bowl game Hayes lauded an Oregon team that "gave us a little more than we wanted."

He said the Buckeyes won because they made no major errors and Oregon made five (two interceptions, two lost fumbles and a major penalty) and also because "one boy kept his head down and the other didn't" on the game's two field goal tries.

Hayes said Ohio State's Don Sutherland never looked at the ball as it sailed between the goal posts for the game-deciding field goal in the fourth quarter. In the third period, also kicking from the 24-yard line, Oregon's Jack Morris "looked at the ball all the way" and missed said Hayes.

"That was the difference," he said.

Round Table Facing Threat From Seaneen

By ALEX KAHN
ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 10 (UP)—Round Table frightened away all but six horses today from a field of 16 originally nominated for Saturday's running of the $25,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

The money-winning champion of 1957, however, will face the highly-improved Seaneen, winner of last Saturday's $50,000 Santa Anita Handicap and second in Round Table the previous week in the Malibu Sequel.

The presence of Seaneen indicated a top-notch race although here were few who felt the Irish-bred Seaneen would defeat Round Table despite the closeness of their previous encounter, when Round Table finished only a head in front of his rival.

The Santa Anita Handicap is a mile and a sixteenth and limited to four-year-olds as a prep for the estimated $170,000 Santa Anita Maternity on Jan. 25, first major goal of Round Table at the meeting.

The Travis Kerr money-winning champion again picks up 130 pounds, the same weight he carried in the seven-furlong Malibu Sequel. But Seaneen because of his victory in the San Carlos went from 114 to 124 pounds.

Although he is running the best of his career, Seaneen has never proven that he could go a distance beyond a mile against top competition and win and also he has not indicated he can pick up extra weight.

The rest of the field was made up of Mystic Eye, considered a doubtful starter, Ekaba, The Searcher, Roscoe Mack and California Kid. Of these, only Mystic Eye rated consideration and there was a possibility he may be declared from the race.

Three Pitchers Sign Contracts With Cardinals

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10 (UP)—The St. Louis Cardinals announced the signing of three more players, all pitchers, bringing to 25 the number of players now under contract on their 39-man winter roster.

The latest signers are Gary Blaylock and Howard Nunn, both right-handers, and left-hander Bill Smith.

Of the three, Nunn had the best 1957 record. The 22-year-old Westfield, N. C., native had a 2.97 earned run average at Houston. Smith had a 3.12 ERA at Columbus, Ga., and Blaylock 4.20 at Rochester.

THE MAN STICKS

Stan Won't Retire; Aims At 4,000 Hits

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (UP)—Stan Musial has thrown his retirement time table out the window and now expects to play indefinitely.

Two years ago the St. Louis star confided to friends he expected to put in three more seasons. By then, he felt, he would have achieved the greatest of his goals—the coveted 3,000 hit mark.

A virtual cinch now to pick up the 43 hits to round out the 3,000 hit total by next Memorial Day, the 37-year-old Musial is convinced he can play top flight ball for at least two, three years or even longer.

"I've decided to go on playing as long as I feel I can continue to hit around .300," he said today. "And the way I feel now, I think I can hit around .320 or so for several years yet. As a matter of fact, I feel better, stronger and younger today than I've felt since 1955."

Musial, here to receive Sports Illustrated's fourth annual award as the "sportsman of the year," grinned widely when reminded that he has said he would retire after reaching his 3,000 hit goal.

"I've changed my mind," Stan said breaking out into a loud laugh. "I've set a new goal for myself . . . 4,000 hits."

Musial has another goal. He is eager to win at least one more National League batting title, which would equal the record of eight championships established by Honus Wagner, the Pittsburgh

Miami's Varone Signs '58 Pact With Canadians

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10 (UP)—Halfback John Varone, captain of last year's University of Miami football team, has been signed to a 1958 contract by the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, the Western Interprovincial Football Union club announced today.

Varone, fourth draft choice of San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League, is 21 years old and weighs 167 pounds. His home is in Boston.

CZECH STAR AGREES
COLOGNE, Germany, Jan. 11 (UP)—Ex-Wimbledon Champion Jaroslav Drobný former Czech star now playing for Egypt will be among the star players competing in the 1958 International German Indoors Tennis Championships here, the organizers said today.

Stan made it No. 7 last year when he finished with 351 batting average to maintain his lifetime .340 mark over a 16-year period.

The shoulder injury, which ended his National League consecutive game record at 895 last August, has almost completely healed, Musial said.

"I still have a knot in back of my left shoulder blade," Stan said. "But it doesn't seem to bother me. Of course, I really won't know until I start swinging a bat, but from the looks of things, it appears to be okay again."

"Doc Baumann, our club trainer, who lives in St. Louis, has been working on it all winter. I've been visiting him twice a week since the close of the season. I had X-rays taken only recently and the pictures showed a complete recovery."

While not predicting another batting title, Musial said he saw no reason why he shouldn't hit about as well as he did last year. "I think the fellow who hits .340 will win the batting title," he said. "Barring an injury, I should be flirting with that mark next season. The important thing is to get off to a good start."

Dr. Roger Banister, Sports Illustrated's award winner in 1954, Dodger pitcher Johnny Podres, the 1955 winner and Olympic track star Bobby Morrow, the 1956 winner, also were honored.

Al Masters May Leave Hospital By Next Monday

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (UP)—Al Masters, Stanford athletic director, forced into a hospital after an internal hemorrhage during a plane flight, is expected to return to the west coast Monday.

Masters was taken to West Suburban Hospital Wednesday after a flight from Philadelphia where he attended the National Collegiate Athletic Association Convention.

Masters, who underwent a serious operation several years ago, said he has been placed on a special diet and ordered to take it easy.

"If I don't have another flare-up, I'll be taken home Monday," he said. "I'm just able to take liquids. I'm on a strict ulcer diet."

He declined comment on a report Stanford had interviewed Coach Jim Myers of Iowa State for the Stanford head coaching job. "I can't mention any names until our athletic board meets Jan. 16," Masters said.

Williams To Draw Highest Salary In History Of Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP)—Ted Williams, the American League's batting king, the Associated Press' male athlete of the year and baseball's best gate attraction, will not only be back with the Boston Red Sox next season but he'll be drawing down the highest salary ever paid to a player in the history of the game. The 39-year-old slugger, who enjoyed one of the greatest years of his long and brilliant career during the 1957 season, is expected to sign a contract that could bring him as much as $125,000 in 1958. That's an increase of $25,000 over what he earned last year. The contract will include several bonus clauses based on attendance, just as in '57.

The signing ceremony will take place in Fenway Park early next month when baseball's No. 1 hitter is scheduled to arrive in Boston to fulfill his agreement to appear in the annual sportsman's show.

Williams, who has been dividing his time this winter between fishing off the Florida keys and Puerto Rico, and running his fishing tackle business in Miami, understandably enough did not wish to discuss his new contract.

He emphasized, however, that he never has had any salary difficulties with owner Tom Yawkey and he did not anticipate any this time either. For a super star, Ted always has been one of the easiest to sign. He never has been a holdout.

The Red Sox have always treated him fairly, the tall fence-buster said. "That's one of the reasons I've always been grateful that I came up with them and that's why I have always said that I intend to finish out my baseball career in Boston."

A decisive factor in Williams' overwhelming choice of the 214 sports writers and sportscasters as the nation's outstanding athlete was his remarkable .388 average, the highest figure reached by a major league batter since he, himself, hit .405 in 1941. At 39, he was the oldest ever to win a batting crown.

Ted received 85 first-place votes for a total of 434 points to easily outdistance his rivals. Milwaukee's Lew Burdette, who defeated the Yankees three times in the Braves' World Series triumph last October, was second with 54 first-place votes and 226 points.

Carmen Basilio, who whipped Ray Robinson for the middleweight title last September, was third with 17 first-place votes and 113 points.

Mickey Mantle of the Yankees, winner of the AP's male athlete of the year poll for 1956, finished in a tie for 13th this year. Mantle, who edged Williams as the American League's most valuable player for 1957, received only one first-place vote and 14 points.

Points were awarded on a basis of three for first, two for second and one for third.

"I am very proud to have been singled out for this award," Williams said. "I want to thank the Associated Press and all those who made it possible. It is a great honor and I am deeply appreciative."

Williams, a firm believer in setting personal goals before each campaign, already has set his sights on the following for the 1958 season:

A .330 batting average, at least 100 games, 25 to 30 home runs and 100 runs batted in.

These are practically the same aims he had last spring. He not only exceeded his batting with more than 50 points in '57, but he participated in 132 games and smashed 38 home runs. He fell short of his RBI goal, driving in 87 runs, but that was due to a combination of things — an illness which kept him out of the line-up for three weeks near the end of the season, inability of the batters who preceded him to get on base with any semblance of regularity and 119 bases on balls.

A firm believer in keeping in condition all-year-round, the 6-4 Williams currently weighs around 220, some 10 pounds above his normal playing weight. Ted has had very little time for exercise this winter due to an unusually busy winter schedule. He intends to start light training next month.

"I just hope to be in 100 per cent shape when the season opens," Williams said. "My biggest worry is injuries. I've been plagued with one every year. I was very fortunate last year to avoid any injury or serious illness until the very end of the season. If I can be as lucky this year I don't see why I can't have another good season."

Following Williams, Burdette and Basilio in the balloting were: John Crow, Texas A&M, football (67); Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals, baseball (46); Wilt Chamberlain, Kansas, basketball (42); Dick Mayer, open golf champion (44); Jimmy Brown, Cleveland Browns, football (40); Floyd Patterson, heavyweight boxing champion (34); Bill Russell and Bob Cousy, Boston Celtics, basketball (27 each); Hank Aaron, Milwaukee Braves, baseball (24); Mantle and Lennie Rosenbuth, North Carolina, basketball (14 each). Other athletes had scattered votes.

Masters, who underwent a serious operation several years ago, said he has been placed on a special diet and ordered to take it easy.

"If I don't have another flare-up, I'll be taken home Monday," he said. "I'm just able to take liquids. I'm on a strict ulcer diet."

BOSS IMPRESSED

Billy Martin Signs 1st Detroit Contract

By JACK BERRY

DETROIT, Jan. 10 (UP)—Billy Martin, who was acquired to put some "fire" into the Detroit Tigers, didn't disappoint his new manager Jack Tighe in their first formal meeting today.

"I was greatly impressed by him," Tighe said after Martin signed his 1958 contract following a brief talk with general manager Johnny McHale. Martin, 29, came to Detroit Nov. 20, 1957, in a 13-player trade with the Kansas City Athletics.

Although contract terms were not disclosed, it appeared from McHale's remarks that Martin would receive a bonus after the season if the Tigers do well.

"I told Billy Detroit is starved for a winner," McHale said "and that his earning possibilities here are unlimited. He said he'd rather sign now instead of fighting about terms and go on what he does this season."

"I had been told that Billy was a nice fellow—I wasn't expecting some uncouth character to come in because of the bad publicity he's had. And I must say that I was much more impressed than I thought I'd be," Tighe said.

"And," Tighe added with a grateful grin, "he's got desire."

Martin talked about his recent Texas hunting trip with Mickey Mantle ("If you miss a deer you can always be sure Mickey will run it down"). His winter job selling cars in Kansas City ("It's picking up now"), but mostly about baseball.

When asked if he thought the Tigers looked lachardaisical, Martin hedged a bit and answered: "Any team that doesn't win the pennant looks lachardaisical. If we can help each other out with constructive criticism and a little aggression that'll be fine," he grinned.

"When I started with the Yankees I thought Tommy Henrich (now a Tiger coach) hated me," Martin said. "He kept telling me 'You're fresh.'" Martin said. "I finally found out he was just trying to make a ball player out of me."

Regarding his switch to shortstop in the tentative Tiger starting lineup, Martin said he'll play anywhere "as long as I can play."

"I played shortstop for half a season in Oakland in 1949 and I played some short and third for the Yankees."

Grambling's Tigers Meet Alcorn Quint

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — Coach Fred Hobby's Grambling Tigers will put a nine-game winning streak on the line in the home gymnasium Saturday night against the Alcorn College Braves.

Grambling won No. 12 of the season Thursday night against Miss. Vocational College, 104-65. The MVC game was a MWA conference affair and Grambling is now 1-0 in league play and 12-2 overall.

The Saturday game will end home competition for the current semester and area fans will be without basketball for exactly two weeks.

Two north Louisiana players, James Hooper of Tallulah, with 308 points in 14 games, and Jerry Barr of Bastrop with 274 are pacing the Tigers in scoring. Rex Tippitt of Ruston is the only freshman with over a hundred points in the first half of the season.

Alcorn, perennial champions of the South Central Conference will bring a scrappy bunch of cagers here. They broke even with Grambling in two home games last year. Game time is 7:30 o'clock.

Round Table Facing Threat From Seaneen

By ALEX KAHN
ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 10 (UP)—Round Table frightened away all but six horses today from a field of 15 originally nominated for Saturday's running of the $25,000 Added Santa Fernando Stakes at Santa Anita.

The money-winning champion of 1957, however, will face the highly-improved Seaneen, winner of last Saturday's $50,000 Added Santa Carlos and second to Round Table the previous week in the Malibu Sequet.

The presence of Seaneen indicated a top-notch race although here were few who felt the Irish-bred Seaneen would defeat Round Table despite the closeness of their previous encounter, when Round Table finished only a head in front of his rival.

The San Fernando is at a mile and a sixteenth and limited to four-year-olds as a prep for the estimated $170,000 Santa Anita Maundy on Jan. 25, first major goal of Round Table at the meeting.

The Travis Kerr money-winning champ again picks up 130 pounds, the same weight he carried in the seven-furlong Malibu Sequet. But Seaneen because of his victory in the San Carlos went from 114 to 124 pounds.

Although he is running the best of his career, Seaneen has never proven that he could go a distance beyond a mile against top competition and win and also he has not indicated he can pick up extra weight.

The rest of the field was made up of Mystic Eye, considered a doubtful starter, Ekaba, The Searcher, Roscoe Maney and California Kid. Of these, only Mystic Eye rated consideration and there was a possibility he may be declared from the race.

Three Pitchers Sign Contracts With Cardinals

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10 (UP)—The St. Louis Cardinals announced the signing of three new players, all pitchers, bringing to 25 the number of players now under contract on their 39-man winter roster.

The latest signers are Gary Blaylock and Howard Nunn, both right-handers, and lefthander Bill Smith.

Of the three, Nunn had the best 1957 record. The 22-year-old Westfield, N. C., native had a 2.97 earned run average at Houston. Smith had a 3.12 ERA at Columbus, Ga., and Blaylock 4.20 at Rochester.

THE MAN STICKS

Stan Won't Retire; Aims At 4,000 Hits

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (UP)—Stan Musial has thrown his retirement time table out the window and now expects to play indefinitely.

Two years ago the St. Louis star confided to friends he expected to put in three more seasons. By then, he felt, he would have achieved the greatest of his goals — the coveted 3,000 hit mark.

A virtual cinch now to pick up the 43 hits to round out the 3,000 hit total by next Memorial Day, the 37-year-old Musial is confident he can play top flight ball for at least two, three years or even longer.

"I've decided to go on playing as long as I feel I can continue to hit around .300," he said today. "And the way I feel now, I think I can hit around .320 or so for several years yet. As a matter of fact, I feel better, stronger and younger today than I've felt since 1955."

Musial, here to receive Sports Illustrated's fourth annual award as the "sportsman of the year," grinned widely when reminded that he has said he would retire after reaching his 3,000 hit goal.

"I've changed my mind," Stan said breaking out into a loud laugh. "I've set a new goal for myself — 4,000 hits."

Musial has another goal. He is eager to win at least one more National League batting title, which would equal the record of eight championships established by Honus Wagner, the Pittsburgh immortal. Stan made it No. 7 last year when he finished with a .351 batting average to maintain his lifetime .340 mark over a 16-year period.

The shoulder injury, which ended his National League consecutive game record at 895 last August, has almost completely healed, Musial said.

"I still have a knot in back of my left shoulder blade," Stan said. "But it doesn't seem to bother me. Of course, I really won't know until I start swinging a bat, but from the looks of things, it appears to be okay again."

Each farm taking part in the program for spring-planted crops must have a soil bank base established for it. This must be done before a program agreement may be signed by the farmer, ASC officials have pointed out.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

Children Express Their Fears In Different Ways

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

It isn't unusual for a child to be fearful in the face of a new situation. A child may be silent about his fear but he shows it in other ways.

Young Kathy may be afraid of the vacuum cleaner and kick up a big fuss every time it is turned on. Jimmy who is two years old, may still harbor some of that fear but he is timid about expressing it. Instead he cries and says he has a stomach ache whenever the vacuum is turned on, thus getting his mother's attention and ending her bout of cleaning.

Howard pretended he was not afraid of the dentist but when he got to the office he would not go beyond the front door. He said that he didn't want his teeth cleaned, they didn't need it, he washed them everyday. Promised rewards, he went inside but then he screamed so loudly when the dentist began his work that he had to be removed.

Mini proclaimed loudly how much she wanted to go to camp, but a week before she was ready to go to camp she became ill. Just stomach aches and vomiting. Pinned down she admitted that she was afraid of going so far away from Mommy and Daddy, she'd rather stay at home.

One little boy who failed in several grades because of inability to read, finally made a brilliant success after going to a school where he was put into a remedial reading room. But then he could not be persuaded to leave this school though able to read and located, as it was well out of his own school district.

It was plain that he wanted to stay where he had been a success and feared competition in a school in which heretofore he had been a failure.

Accept Their Behavior

Let all points up the fact that if we are to help children meet new situations or those in which they have become afraid, we have to accept their behavior as natural and neither punish nor humiliate them because of it.

Prepare the child for a visit to the doctor, dentist or hospital by making everything so clear to him, through explanations and answers to his questions, that there is nothing strange about the adventure when it takes place.

Let Kathy and Jimmy have supervision of the vacuum — "their" vacuum to be turned off and on by them, not by mother. Once it is under their control they cease to fear it.

As for the reluctant student, let him stay where he is, happy and successful until he, himself, wants to make the change. He might revert to his old failing habit in the old situation. Understanding is what every parent needs to meet the normal fears of normal children.

If you would like our leaflet "Preparing for the Hospital" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 89 to Myrtle Meyer Eldred care of this newspaper.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Children Learn Manners By Training And Example

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Our 16-year-old son worries us to death. He's not a bad boy, in trouble with the law or anything like that; he's just a big ox who doesn't seem to care about decent manners.

When we have guests, the boy sits in the living room, shoes off and hair uncombed) so engrossed in comic books he doesn't even raise his head to say hello.

My husband doesn't want to make a scene before guests so he says nothing. I maintain the thing to do is bring the matter right out into the open, guests or no guests, or the boy will never learn.

My husband says our son is just like my no-good brother and there's nothing we can do about it so we should stop aggravating ourselves. What is your opinion?

Another Ann.

Manners are made not born. This has nothing to do with heredity. Children learn by training and example. If your son is 16 and he's having like an ox, you and your husband had better get busy. To write him off as "hopeless" would be a terrible mistake.

Explain to your son that as a member of the family he has a responsibility to guests who come into the house. It costs nothing to stand up on his feet and extend his hand. If he doesn't care to visit, he can excuse himself and go to his own room.

Let him know this is no "favor" to you, but a common courtesy that sets human beings apart from animals. Be firm.

At the first sign of improvement on his part, praise him. Remember, praise takes practice. He's starting pretty late in the game and will need plenty of encouragement. Good luck.

Dear Ann: I felt very sorry for the bride who wrote for help with her snoring groom. This may be funny to some people but I didn't see much to laugh at.

I'd like to offer a practical suggestion. My aunt had the same problem and this is how she solved it.

The doctor told her the reason her husband snored was because his mouth fell open, and the cure was to figure out a way to keep his mouth closed at night.

My aunt hit on the idea of tying strips of muslin under his chin and over his head. This kept his jaw from dropping down and solved the problem completely. Please pass this word along.

Asterisk.

Did you say strips of muslin? The only thing missing is the embalming fluid! Your uncle must be one in a million. I don't think many men would stand for this.

Besides, tying a guy's mouth shut could lead to worse problems than snoring. He couldn't say "I love you" or anything. No thanks; the cure sounds worse than the sickness.

Dear Ann: I'm not asking you to take my side. I could be wrong. All I want is an honest opinion. We have three sons, under six years of age. I hold a full-time job and do all my own housework and laundry. I'm up at 6:00 a. m., make breakfast for the family, drive my husband to work, then drop the children at my mother's. I'm at my own job at 8:00 a. m.

When I get home at night I have to clean and cook, give the children baths and do laundry or ironing. My husband plops himself in a chair, watches TV or reads until he falls asleep. The thing that galls me is that he complains that the house is always a mess and that I'm "lazy!"

He won't even take the boys for a ride on Saturday afternoon so I can clean in peace. Please don't tell me to quit my job. I can't. We are paying on our house, the furniture and car, and could never make it on my husband's salary. — H. W.

Your husband is a selfish spoiled brat. Any woman who helps to bring home the bacon can insist that her husband help her fry it.

You are not only wife, mother, partial bread-winner, but chauffeur, laundress, housekeeper, cook and night-nurse. If he doesn't pitch in voluntarily he may be forced to do so one of these days — when you collapse.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.)

Draw Plans For Gardens Says Garden Expert

Mrs. W. E. Conger of Arcadia was the guest speaker for the January meeting of the Jonesboro-Hodge Garden Club.

Mrs. Wilbur McDonald opened the meeting and introduced the speaker. Mrs. Conger's subject was "The Eight Essentials of a Well Landscaped Garden." Defining the garden as a picture to be painted, the speaker decried the hodge-podge method of cultivating flowers.

A plan, said Mrs. Conger, is a "must." Plenty of plans can be found in garden magazines she said, or if convenient it is well to consult a landscape architect.

The eight essentials she listed as follows: 1.—To have the garden flow away from the house and merge into the out-door living area. Leave plenty of circulation in planting. 2.—On open lawns bordered by trees or bushes she recommends zoyzia for a beautiful sod. 3.—Perennial borders adjoining trees and shrubs should be mass-planted in groups of seven or eight. Iris, Daylilies, chrysanthemums, blue salvia will all give a good display. 4.—Group a cutting area to provide ample material for cut flowers. 5.—Vegetable garden, if you so desire. 6.—Service area — this should be screened from the rest of the garden by hedge or decorative fencing. 7.—A retreat: every yard needs one. Globes, statuary and the like should be used sparingly and always for a purpose. 8.—Play area, for the all-important sand pile which later becomes a lily pool, trees to climb and room to grow. Following these directions anyone can have an interesting and beautiful yard the speaker concluded.

WHY GROW OLD?

Join Marathon Now; You Owe It To Yourself

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Women generally are so busy planning for and caring for and thinking of their families that they may neglect themselves without realizing it. We so often hear women say, "I do not have time to exercise or take little rest periods during the day." They do not have time because they do not take time to do those things which give us added zest and life added bloom.

Yet we all owe ourselves something. We have a debt to ourselves to remain as young for as long as we can, to protect our health and our looks. We owe it to ourselves and to those who love us.

Why not concentrate on you this next eight weeks? As most of you know, I print my 8-Week Self-Improvement Marathon each year at this time. Marathon does not take much of your time each day but it will bring you great results. Not only are the immediate results lovely, but during this eight weeks you will form

Shreveport, with the Reverend Lawrence Plummy as officiant.

The bride is a graduate of Block at Jonesville and of Northwestern at Natchitoches, and now teaches at Riverside City School.

The groom is a graduate of Indiana State University at Bloomington, Ind., and is with the Brown - Root Construction Co. in Shreveport, where the newly wedded couple are making their home.

the habit of beauty and health care. Once the habit is yours, it will seem as easy as eating three meals a day and sleeping every night. You also will form a taste for the essential foods and will lose bits which do little for you. There is no habit stronger than the one we form in food likes and dislikes.

If you have been planning to join Marathon each year, but have procrastinated, or if you have meant to write for the booklet this week but haven't, do not delay any longer. You will have company, the spirit of competition, and my help.

If you would like to join my 8-Week Self-Improvement Marathon, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for the Marathon booklet. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

Children Express Their Fears In Different Ways

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

It isn't unusual for a child to be fearful in the face of a new situation. A child may be silent about his fear but he shows it in other ways.

Young Kathy may be afraid of the vacuum cleaner and kick up a big fuss every time it is turned on. Jimmy who is two years older may still harbor some of that fear but he is timid about expressing it. Instead he cries and says he has a stomach ache whenever the vacuum is turned on, thus getting his mother's attention and ending her bout of cleaning.

Not Afraid

Howard pretended he was not afraid of the dentist but when he got to the office he would not go beyond the front door. He said that he didn't want his teeth cleaned, they didn't need it, he washed them everyday. Promised rewards, he went inside but then he screamed so loudly when the dentist began his work that he had to be removed.

Mimi proclaimed loudly how much she wanted to go to camp, but a week before she was ready to go to camp she became ill. Just stomach aches and vomiting. Pinned down she admitted that she was afraid of going so far away from Mommy and Daddy, she'd rather stay at home.

One little boy who failed in several grades because of inability to read, finally made a brilliant success after going to a school where he was put into a remedial reading room. But then he could not be persuaded to leave this school though able to read and located, as it was well out of his own school district.

It was plain that he wanted to stay where he had been a success and feared competition in a school in which heretofore he had been a failure.

Accept Their Behavior

It all points up the fact that if we are to help children meet new situations or those in which they have become afraid, we have to accept their behavior as natural and neither punish nor humiliate them because of it.

Prepare the child for a visit to the doctor, dentist or hospital by making everything so clear to him, through explanations and answers to his questions, that there is nothing strange about the adventure when it takes place.

Let Kathy and Jimmy have supervision of the vacuum — "their" vacuum to be turned off and on by them, not by mother. Once it is under their control they cease to fear it.

As for the reluctant student, let him stay where he is, happy and successful until he, himself, wants to make the change. He might revert to his old failing habit in the old situation. Understanding is what every parent needs to meet the normal fears of normal children.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Children Learn Manners By Training And Example

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Our 16-year-old son worries us to death. He's not a bad boy, in trouble with the law or anything like that; he's just a big ox who doesn't seem to care about decent manners.

When we have guests, the boy sits in the living room, (shoes off and hair uncombed) so engrossed in comic books he doesn't even raise his head to say hello.

My husband doesn't want to make a scene before guests so he says nothing. I maintain the thing to do is bring the matter right out into the open, guests or no guests, or the boy will never learn.

My husband says our son is just like my no-good brother and there's nothing we can do about it so we should stop aggravating ourselves. What is your opinion?

Another Ann: Manners are made not born. This has nothing to do with heredity. Children learn by training and example. If your son is 16 and behaving like an ox, you and your husband had better get busy. To write him off as "hopeless" would be a terrible mistake.

Explain to your son that as a member of the family he has a responsibility to guests who come into the house. It costs nothing to stand up on his feet and extend his hand. If he doesn't care to visit, he can excuse himself and go to his own room.

Let him know this is no "favor" to you, but a common courtesy that sets human beings apart from animals. Be firm.

At the first sign of improvement on his part, praise him. Remember poise takes practice. He's starting pretty late in the game and will need plenty of encouragement. Good luck.

Dear Ann: I felt very sorry for the bride who wrote for help with her snoring groom. This may be funny to some people but I didn't see much to laugh at.

I'd like to offer a practical suggestion. My aunt had the same problem and this is how she solved it:

The doctor told her the reason her husband snored was because his mouth fell open, and the cure was to figure out a way to keep his mouth closed at night.

My aunt hit on the idea of tying strips of muslin under his chin and over his head. This kept his jaw from dropping down and solved the problem completely. Please pass this word along. — Asterisk.

Did you say strips of muslin? The only thing missing is the embalming fluid! Your uncle must be one in a million. I don't think many men would stand for this.

Besides, tying a guy's mouth shut could lead to worse problems than snoring. He couldn't say "I love you" or anything. No thanks; the cure sounds worse than the sickness.

Dear Ann: I'm not asking you to take my side. I could be wrong. All I want is an honest opinion.

We have three sons, under six years of age. I hold a full-time job and do all my own housework and laundry. I'm up at 6:00 a.m., make breakfast for the family, drive my husband to work, then drop the children at my mother's. I'm at my own job at 8:00 a.m.

When I get home at night, I have to clean and cook, give the children baths and do laundry or ironing. My husband plods himself in a chair, watches TV or reads until he falls asleep. The thing that galls me is that he complains that the house is always a mess and that I'm "lazy!"

He won't even take the boys for a ride Saturday afternoon so I can clean in peace. Please don't tell me to quit my job. I can't. We are paying on our house, the furniture and car, and could never make it on my husband's salary. — H. W.

Your husband is a selfish spoiled brat. Any woman who helps to bring home the bacon can insist that her husband help her fry it.

You are not only wife, mother, partial bread-winner, but chauffeur, laundress, housekeeper, cook and night-nurse. If he doesn't pitch in voluntarily he may be forced to do so one of these days — when you collapse.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.)

Draw Plans For Gardens Says Garden Expert

Mrs. W. E. Conger of Arcadia was the guest speaker for the January meeting of the Jonesboro-Hodge Garden Club.

Mrs. Wilbur McDonald opened the meeting and introduced the speaker. Mrs. Conger's subject was "The Eight Essentials of a Well Landscaped Garden." Defining the garden as a picture to be painted, the speaker decried the hodge-podge method of cultivating flowers.

A plan, said Mrs. Conger, is a "must." Plenty of plans can be found in garden magazines she said, or if convenient it is well to consult a landscape architect. The eight essentials she listed as follows: 1.—To have the garden flow away from the house and merge into the out-door living area. Leave plenty of circulation in planting. 2.—On open lawns bordered by trees or bushes she recommends zoysia for a beautiful sod. 3.—Perennial borders adjoining trees and shrubs should be mass-planted in groups of seven or eight. Iris, Daylilies, shasta daisies, blue salvia will all give a good display. 4.—Group a cutting area to provide ample material for cut flowers. 5.—Vegetable garden, if you so desire. 6.—Service area — this should be screened from the rest of the garden by hedge or decorative fencing. 7.—A retreat: every yard needs one. Globes, statues and the like should be used sparingly and always for a purpose. 8.—Play area, for the all-important sand pile which later becomes a lily pool, trees to climb and room to grow. Following these directions anyone can have an interesting and beautiful yard the speaker concluded.

WHY GROW OLD?

Join Marathon Now; You Owe It To Yourself

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Women generally are so busy planning for and caring for and thinking of their families that they may neglect themselves without realizing it. We so often hear women say, "I do not have time to exercise or take little rest periods during the day." They do not have time because they do not have time to do those things which give us added zest and life added bloom.

Yet we all owe ourselves something. We have a debt to ourselves to remain as young for as long as we can, to protect our health and our looks. We owe it to ourselves and to those who love us.

Why not concentrate on you this next eight weeks? As most of you know, I print my 8-Week Self-Improvement Marathon each year at this time. Marathon does not take much of your time each day but it will bring you great results. Not only are the immediate results lovely, but during this eight weeks you will form the habit of beauty and health care. Once the habit is yours, it will seem as easy as eating three meals a day and sleeping every night. You also will form a taste for the essential foods and will lose much of your longing for the rich bits which do little for you. There is no habit stronger than the one we form in food likes and dislikes.

If you have been planning to join Marathon each year, but have procrastinated, or if you have meant to write for the booklet this week but haven't, do not delay any longer. You will have company, the spirit of competition, and my help.

If you would like to join my 8-Week Self-Improvement Marathon, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for the Marathon booklet. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

District Court's Docket Is Heavy

More than 100 charges were brought before Fourth District Court yesterday, when it resumed session after two weeks without hearings.

Sentenced to a penitentiary term was Jesse Ray Kennon, 19, who changed his plea to guilty on charges of theft of a truck valued at $750.00 and simple burglary. He received two years on the first charge, and one on the second, the terms to run concurrently.

Clyde Armand Rawls, who threatened to kill Sheriff Bailey Grant when the officer attempted to take him into custody, drew five years in the state penitentiary at Angola for attempted murder.

The 17-year-old youth, who had escaped from L.T.I. last June 25, held a shotgun on Grant when the lawman went to the teenager's home in December. He warned Grant that he would shoot the officer, if he tried to arrest Rawls. Grant knocked the shotgun from the escapee's hands.

His parents, Clyde Arnold Rawls and Mrs. Lola Rawls yesterday denied charges of perjury, and trial was set for Feb. 7. They are charged with stating that they did not know where their son was, when they testified concerning his escape at the fall term of the grand jury. At the time when they testified, it is charged that the youth was living in their home, with their knowledge.

General Challenges Ike's Space Plans

lie today and make certain decisions now."

The Preparedness subcommittee continued its inquiry into the missile and general defense situation today, hearing from Nelson A. Rockefeller, who headed a non-government investigation completed recently.

Rockefeller testified the balance of military power is shifting toward Russia and that the United States must make a 10-year, "sustained, major effort" to pull ahead.

Schmiver reviewed Air Force capabilities in the missiles and space field, saying the Air Force has about half a billion dollars in new facilities for missiles, a unit of the "greatest competence," and a "vast military, scientific and industrial organization." He said this organization can provide "springboards to substantial shortfalls in our mastery of astronautics."

Duplications
"I believe," he continued, "that any program to develop a separate astronautics agency would result in duplication of capabilities already existing in the Air Force ballistic missiles programs, and at a cost in funds and time similar to that already expended on these programs."

The general said the Air Force could undertake immediately the following space projects:

"A satellite to be placed in orbit 'with a respectable payload,' using the existing Thor missile and second-stage rockets.

By adding a third stage to the Thor, Schmiver said, such a vehicle could make unmanned reconnaissance of the moon 'at a relatively early date.'

A slightly modified Thor with high-energy fuel additives, the general claimed, "can make possible initial unmanned reconnaissance of Mars and Venus."

Using a Titan-ICBM now under development—and a booster, plus high energy second- and third-stage rockets, Schmiver declared satellites with "much greater weights" could be placed in orbit and "could provide extended manned satellite missions. This vehicle 'could provide manned flight around the moon and back to the earth.'"

Just A Few
Schmiver listed these as "a few specific examples of capabilities now at hand" and urged a start on them "immediately if we are to have any chance of leading in space technology in the 1965-70 period."

Last Dec. 13, after Secretary of Defense McNamara had revealed a proposal for a unified space agency, the Air Force announced establishment of its own "Directorate of Astronautics." The announcement was no sooner made by the Air Force than it was canceled on direction of the Defense Department, as "premature."

Today's release by the Air Force of Schmiver's statement to the Senate group departed from a normal procedure which the Pentagon has followed for some years in letting congressional committees handle release of testimony after clearance. There was no immediate explanation of why the Schmiver statement was distributed this evening at the Pentagon press room.

On Jan. 3, the Air Force, with Defense Department approval, announced the activation of the first two IRBM squadrons. The first, to be equipped with the Thor, was formed on Jan. 1 and the second, using the Jupiter, will come into being Jan. 15.

President Eisenhower, in submitting a supplemental defense spending request to Congress this week, asked for authority to transfer 10 million dollars from 1950 appropriations to start the new defense-wide space agency. The administration has said also that a additional funds for the new agency, which will have charge of all new programs involving outer space, will be requested in the new defense budget to be submitted to Congress next week.

In outlining his plans for the new space agency recently, McNamara said it would be administered by a single manager and would not be under the control of any of the military services, which have been competing for money to promote their own missiles and new projects.

Rockefeller headed a special 30-man study group which recommended last week that the nation step up its defense spending by three billion dollars each year for the next several years.

He was called before the Senate Preparedness subcommittee to expand on the study group's ideas of what needs to be done, as Rockefeller put it, to assure survival.

Rockefeller told the Senators, who are digging into the reasons why the United States has fallen behind Russia in the missile and satellite fields, that his panel felt the country could afford increased spending for such things as education and health and still cure its military deficiencies.

Rockefeller said the panel felt the United States would have the capacity to meet any Soviet military moves in the next year or two but the situation after that would depend on what steps the nation takes now to strengthen itself.

Sen. Johnson (D-Tex), the Senate majority leader and chairman of the subcommittee, thanked Rockefeller for his testimony. "I hope millions of Americans share your determination to see that we have an adequate defense so that some day we will not have to go into combat with a broken sword," Johnson said.

The House Armed Services Committee met to organize a similar inquiry. Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) said the first witness would be Secretary of Defense McNamara, to testify Monday, and that every effort would be made to keep politics out of the investigation.

The House committee members were not making any comparisons with Johnson's inquiry for quotation, but one said privately the House group should make good progress "because none of us is running for president." Johnson is considered as possible presidential contender for 1960.

Johnson complained that the Eisenhower administration had cut Air Force requests for missile funds by 42 per cent in the current budget. He also said little attention had been paid to request by other services for missile money last year.

Sen. Symington (D-Mo), another subcommittee member, commented that of the 25 billion dollars spent by this country on defense since the Korean War, between 50 and 75 billion had been wasted.

Symington, a former secretary of the Air Force, told a reporter he had contended for years that the Pentagon was wasting money through duplication and other inefficiencies caused by the three-service setup.

Alexandria Is 'Nerve Center'

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 10 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Raymond F. Huff, Louisiana Civil Defense director, said today Alexandria will become the nerve center of the state in event of national emergency such as war.

Huff told a civil defense meeting the city will be state headquarters for civil defense and the military establishment and "other governing agencies of Louisiana would move here from Baton Rouge and New Orleans because those cities almost certainly would be bombed."

"I happen to know," he said, "that several state agencies have earmarked buildings here just in case."

Civil Defense, he said, will stage a full-scale test exercise in July and operate from Alexandria for several days.

General Chennault Is Due Here Today
Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, who last week told newsmen in Formosa he had cancer, comes home today from a junket to familiar country.

The General's plane will touch down at Schriber Field at nine o'clock this morning.

Chennault was on Formosa concerning business with Civil Air Transport, the Chinese airline he formed after World War II, when his famous Flying Tiger group was deactivated.

Apparently the Tigers haven't forgotten their 67-year-old chief, a Denver plumber, and one-time Tiger, Woodrow W. Bussey, offered last week to give up one of his lungs, or both, if that would help his former commander.

CLEAN SWEEP
ONTARIO, Ore.—(UP)—Mrs. Hazel Palle, reported to state police that thieves not only stripped cupboards from the walls of her unoccupied ranch-house south of town but also harvested her fruit crop, took all electrical wiring on the place, helped themselves to a load of lumber, stole electrical equipment from the granary and removed windows and window-frames from the house.

Operation
Doctors operated in 1956 when they discovered a spot on his lung. A malignant tumor was found and the upper lobe of Chennault's left lung removed. Doctors at Walter Reed Army Hospital said at that time if there was no recurrence within 12 months the General would "be in the clear."

Thirteen months later another trouble spot appeared in his lung cavity. Dr. Alton Ochsner of New Orleans advised against another operation, however, and Chennault told reporters recently he has been taking shots of nitrogen mustard compound in an attempt to arrest growth of the cancer.

Chennault landed in San Francisco Jan. 21 on charges of operating a motor vehicle with an over-height load. Grady J. Brown denied driving without a license, and with defective brakes, and will be tried on Jan. 31.

Thomas D. Dyer was fined $25 or 10 days in jail, after he admitted theft of merchandise worth $3.30.

James Gibson will be tried on Jan. 21 on charges of operating a motor vehicle with an over-height load. Grady J. Brown denied driving without a license, and with defective brakes, and will be tried on Jan. 31.

Rickover, who was almost forced into retirement in 1953 while he was developing the world's first atomic submarine, said:

"An older person like myself, I have no chances of promotion any more, so it does not make any difference what I do. I can get by with it."

Rickover was almost forced to accept mandatory retirement in 1953 after Navy selection boards twice passed him over for promotion from captain to rear admiral. President Eisenhower approved a proposal that he be retained on active duty after Congress members had protested his lack of promotion, and he finally was advanced to flag rank in 1954.

Tickover said he was given a free hand on designing and building the first atomic submarine because "there were so many people who were certain the project would fail, and they did not want to be associated with it."

Even so, Rickover indicated he was not given much cooperation, saying: "I was kept on, and I was assigned this job all by myself, and given an office in an ex-ladies powder room."

District Court's Docket Is Heavy

More than 100 charges were brought before Fourth District Court yesterday, when it resumed session after two weeks without hearings.

Sentenced to a penitentiary term was Jesse Ray Kennon, 19, who changed his plea to guilty on charges of theft of a truck valued at $750.00 and simple burglary. He received two years on the first charge, and one on the second, the terms to run concurrently.

Clyde Armand Rawls, who threatened to kill Sheriff Bailey Grant when the officer attempted to take him into custody, drew five years in the state penitentiary at Angola for attempted murder.

The 17-year-old youth, who had escaped from L.T.I. last June 25, held a shotgun on Grant when the lawman went to the teenager's home in December. He warned Grant that he would shoot the officer, if he tried to arrest Rawls. Grant knocked the shotgun from the escapee's hands.

His parents, Clyde Arnold Rawls and Mrs. Lola Rawls yesterday denied charges of perjury, and trial was set for Feb. 7. They are charged with stating that they did not know where their son was, when they testified concerning his escape at the fall term of the grand jury. At the time when they testified, it is charged that the youth was living in their home, with their knowledge.

Almon Chester Thornhill, 20, was given three years in the penitentiary on each of seven counts of simple burglary, with the terms to run concurrently.

DUE FOR CHECKUP—General Claire L. Chennault, USAF Ret., famed Flying Tiger chief, arrived in San Francisco from Formosa on a Pan American plane with his wife, Anna, right, and their two daughters. The eldest, Claire Anna, 8, is in background. Chennault, reportedly a cancer victim, will have a medical checkup in Washington after visiting for a week in Monroe, La., his home town. (AP Wirephoto)

General Chennault Is Due Here Today

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, who last week told newsmen in Formosa he had cancer, comes home today from a junket to familiar country.

The General's plane will touch down at Selman Field at nine o'clock this morning.

Chennault was on Formosa concerning business with Civil Air Transport, the Chinese airline he formed after World War II, when his famous Flying Tiger group was deactivated.

General Challenges Ike's Space Plans

lie today and make certain decisions now."

The Preparedness subcommittee continued its inquiry into the missile and general defense situation today, hearing from Nelson A. Rockefeller, who headed a non-government investigation completed recently.

Rockefeller testified the balance of military power is shifting toward Russia and that the United States must make a 10-year, "sustained, major effort" to pull ahead.

Schneider reviewed Air Force capabilities in the missiles and space field, saying the Air Force has about half a billion dollars in new facilities for missiles, a unit of the "greatest competence" and a "vast military, scientific and industrial organization." He said this organization can provide "springboards to substantial shortcuts in our mastery of astronautics."

Duplications
"I believe," he continued, "that any program to develop a separate astronautics agency would result in duplication of capabilities already existing in the Air Force ballistic missiles programs, and at a cost in funds and time similar to that already expended on these programs."

The general said the Air Force could undertake immediately the following space projects:

A satellite to be placed in orbit "with a respectable payload," using the existing Thor missile and second-stage rockets.

By adding a third stage to the Thor, Schneider said, such a vehicle could make unmanned reconnaissance of the moon "at a relatively early date."

A slightly modified Thor with high-energy fuel additives, the general claimed, "can make possible initial unmanned reconnaissance of Mars and Venus."

Using a Titan-ICBM now under development—and a booster, plus high energy second- and third-stage rockets, Schneider declared satellites with "much greater weights" could be placed in orbit and "could provide extended manned satellite missions. This vehicle 'could provide manned flight around the moon and back to the earth.'"

Just A Few
Schneider listed these as "a few specific examples of capabilities now at hand" and urged a start on them "immediately if we are to have any chance of leading in space technology in the 1965-70 period."

Last Dec. 13, after Secretary of Defense McElroy had revealed a proposal for a unified space agency, the Air Force announced establishment of its own "Directorate of Astronautics." The announcement was no sooner made by the Air Force than it was canceled on direction of the Defense Department, as "premature."

Today's release by the Air Force of Schneider's statement to the Senate group departed from a normal procedure which the Pentagon has followed for some years in letting congressional committees handle release of testimony after clearance. There was no immediate explanation of why the Schneider statement was distributed this evening at the Pentagon press room.

On Jan. 3, the Air Force, with Defense Department approval, announced the activation of the first two IRBM squadrons. The first, to be equipped with the Thor, was formed on Jan. 1 and the second, using the Jupiter, will come into being Jan. 15.

President Eisenhower, in submitting a supplemental defense spending request to Congress this week, asked for authority to transfer 10 million dollars from 1958 appropriations to start the new defense space agency. The administration has said also that additional funds for all of new programs involving outer space, will be requested in the new defense budget to be submitted to Congress next week.

In outlining his plans for the new space agency recently, McElroy said it would be administered by a single manager and would not be under the control of any of the military services, which have been competing for money to promote their own missiles and new projects.

Rockefeller headed a special 30-man study group which recommended last week that the nation step up its defense spending by three billion dollars each year for the next several years.

He was called before the Senate Preparedness subcommittee to expand on the study group's ideas of what needs to be done, as Rockefeller put it, to assure survival.

Rockefeller told the Senators, who are digging into the reasons why the United States has fallen behind Russia in the missile and satellite fields, that his panel felt the country could afford increased spending for such things as education and health and still cure its military deficiencies.

Rockefeller said the panel felt the United States would have the capacity to meet any Soviet military moves in the next year or two but the situation after that would depend on what steps the nation takes now to strengthen itself.

Sen. Johnson (D-Tex.), the Senate majority leader and chairman of the subcommittee, thanked Rockefeller for his testimony.

"I hope millions of Americans share your determination to see that we have an adequate defense so that some day we will not have to go into combat with a broken sword," Johnson said.

The House Armed Services Committee met to organize a similar inquiry. Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) said the first witness would be Secretary of Defense McElroy, to testify Monday; and that every effort would be made to keep politics out of the investigation.

The House committees were not making any comparisons with Johnson's inquiry for quotation, but one said privately the House group should make good progress "because none of us is running for president." Johnson is considered as possible presidential timber for 1960.

Johnson complained that the Eisenhower administration had cut Air Force requests for missile funds by 42 per cent in the current budget. He also said little attention had been paid to requests by other services for missile money last year.

Sen. Symington (D-Mo.), another subcommittee member, commented that of the 225 billion dollars spent by this country on defense since the Korean War, between 50 and 75 billion had been wasted.

Symington, a former secretary of the Air Force, told a reporter he had contended for years that the Pentagon was wasting money through duplication and other inefficiencies caused by the three-service setup.

NEW INCIDENT

Girl Suspended
At Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 10.—A Negro girl attending the Central High School said her daughter was suspended today after a pushing incident involving one of the six white girls attending the forcibly integrated school.

26 Walk Out
As Publisher
Raps Faubus

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 10.—Twenty-six persons walked out on Palmer Hoyt tonight during his address to the Arkansas Press Association.

Hoyt devoted most of his speech at the banquet meeting to the Little Rock school integration crisis and its effects on U.S. leadership in the free world.

About 250 persons were present at the event. Some applauded while the Denver Post publisher was speaking but a wave of polite clapping followed the address.

One of those who got up and left during the speech was state Sen. Tom Allen, publisher of a newspaper in his home town of Brinkley, Ark.

Allen left just after Hoyt said he did not intend to pass judgment on Gov. Orval Faubus, who introduced him. Faubus' action in posting state guardsmen around Little Rock Central High School touched off the integration crisis here.

Allen told a newsman angrily: "I think the entire press association owes Gov. Orval Faubus an apology. Mr. Hoyt's speech was in the worst taste I've ever seen, castigating the governor and the people of Arkansas."

One of the association's vice presidents, Keith Tudor of Arkadelphia, Ark., left his place at the head table and walked out of the room when Hoyt first mentioned integration.

Faubus remained at the head table throughout the address and applauded briefly when it was over. Then he exchanged pleasantries with Hoyt.

Later, the governor told newsman he considered the speech "the judgment of another self-styled expert from afar about a situation with which he cannot be familiar."

Authorities said the agent, Frank H. Gerrity, 37, of Columbia, N.J., was showing his identification to the gunman at a subway entrance when the suspect drew a .45 caliber pistol and shot him in the leg. Gerrity grappled with the gunman, and in the struggle, the pistol went off again, wounding the suspect.

The FBI identified the gunman tentatively as Albert Joseph Kostal, a "dangerous" fugitive wanted in Denver for murder. The suspect gave his name as Joseph Delmar, police said.

The town of Clayton, New Mexico (pop. 3,800) owns a municipal buffalo herd. It attracts tourists.

IN MINNESOTA

Search Continues
For Missing Child

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., Jan. 10 (UPI)—A tracking of the boy.

Anderson said the dog "went a little crazy" when he found the pillow case. The dog acted the same way when it led a search party to the home of a "recluse" nearby, Anderson said.

The sheriff would not identify the owners of the garage or the recluse. He said the stains on the pillow case did not appear to be fresh, but it was sent to the state crime laboratory at Minneapolis for analysis.

Earlier, deputies found a bag of charred bones in a dump and brought them to a search headquarters. The bones turned out to be those of animals.

Anderson insisted that Danny is "simply lost—just disappeared into thin air."

Meanwhile, a house-to-house search of International Falls failed to turn up a clue. Anderson said the search will continue and deputies have been assigned to check "isolated spots" in the area.

International Falls residents were inclined to agree with the sheriff that Danny was not kidnapped or murdered, but had already perished in the bitter cold of the U.S.-Canadian border country.

Anderson, who has slept only a few hours since Danny disappeared from his home outside International Falls Wednesday, insisted "there is absolutely no evidence to indicate the boy has met with foul play."

He said he has no plans to ask an FBI investigation of a possible kidnapping. Anderson added, however, that he was in constant touch with federal authorities.

Painter May Be Out Of Luck

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—

Back about Dec. 12 a man started painting Harrison Elementary School at 13th and V Sts. NW.

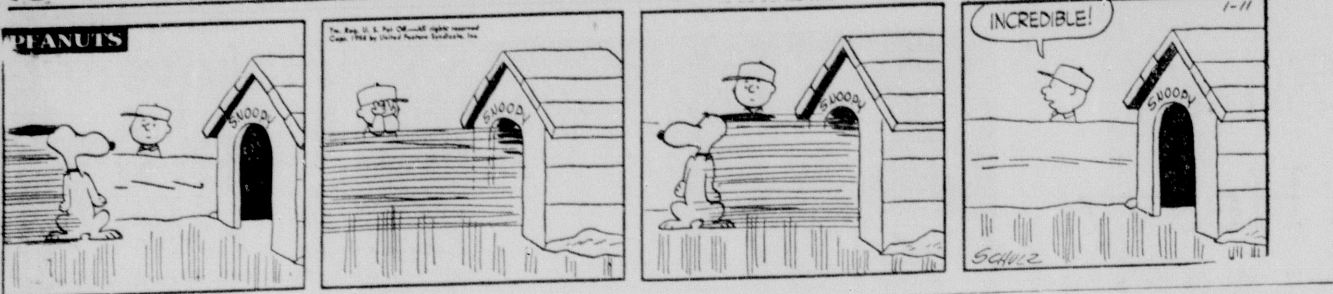

Day after day he labored on, doing a neat job, but nobody paid much attention. He even worked late on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve. He hauled away his ladders last Tuesday.

Today it developed that no painting job had been ordered at the school.

John Rieck, assistant school superintendent in charge of buildings, said he had no idea who the man is or why he undertook the painting.

The painter had mentioned to the custodian that his bill would be $700, but he stands little chance of collecting.

"We can't pay for an unauthorized job," Rieck said.

NEW INCIDENT

Girl Suspended At Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 10 (UP)—The mother of a 17-year-old white girl student at Central High School said her daughter was suspended today after a pushing incident involving one of the six Negro girls attending the forcibly integrated school.

Mrs. Fred Gist said her daughter Darlene Holloway, reported that Principal Jess Matthews suspended her immediately after the incident but did not suspend the Negro girl.

Neither Matthews nor other school officials could be reached for comment.

The mother quoted her daughter as saying the Negro girl got in her way and she shoved her. Mrs. Gist did not identify the Negro girl.

Only hours before the reported suspension, School Supt. Virgil T. Blossom reinstated a Negro girl, Minnie Jean Brown. She was suspended late in December for dumping food on two white boys in the school cafeteria.

The Brown girl was the only Negro suspended since she and eight others entered Central High last Sept. 25 under the protection of federal troops ordered here by President Eisenhower.

At least two white students have been suspended since that time for participation in racial incidents.

Mrs. Gist, a member of the segregationist League of Central High Mothers told newsmen she thought the Negro girl involved in the incident with her daughter also should have been suspended. She said she would confer with Matthews and Blossom Monday.

Only 432 federalized Arkansas National Guardsmen remain on duty at the school in connection with the integration crisis, and the Army posts only about a dozen at a time at the school during class hours.

N.Y. Gunfight Leaves Fugitive, FBI Agent Shot

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (UP)—A gunfight between an FBI agent and a murder suspect who vowed he "would never be taken alive," broke out a block from busy Times Square tonight. Both the agent and the assailant were wounded.

Authorities said the agent, Frank H. Gerrity, 37, of Colonia, N.J., was showing his identification to the gunman at a subway entrance when the suspect drew a .45 caliber pistol and shot him in the leg. Gerrity grappled with the gunman, and in the struggle, the pistol went off again, wounding the suspect.

The FBI identified the gunman tentatively as Albert Joseph Kostal, a "dangerous" fugitive wanted in Denver for murder. The suspect gave his name as Joseph Delmar, police said.

The town of Clayton, New Mexico (pop. 3,800) owns a municipal buffalo herd. It attracts tourists.

Search Continues For Missing Child

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., Jan. 10 (UP)—A tracking dog today led searchers for a five-year-old boy to a blood-stained pillow-case in a garage near the missing lad's home.

Sheriff Ed Anderson said the Weimeraner dog, flown from St. Paul by order of the Minnesota attorney general, found the pillow case in the garage of a rural home about a quarter mile from the home of Danny Lamont.

Danny has been missing in the desolate Minnesota wilderness surrounding this "ice box of the nation" since Wednesday morning. Up to 2,000 Americans and Canadians have searched the area without turning up a trace of the boy.

Anderson said the dog "went little crazy" when he found the pillow case. The dog acted the same way when it led a search party to the home of a "recluse" nearby, Anderson said.

The sheriff would not identify the owners of the garage or the "recluse." He said the stains on the pillow case did not appear to be fresh, but it was sent to a state crime laboratory at Minneapolis for analysis.

Earlier, deputies found a bag of charred bones in a dump near the home. They were searching for the bones to search for clues to the boy's disappearance.

Anderson insisted that Danny "simply lost — just disappeared into thin air."

Meanwhile, a house-to-house search of International Falls failed to turn up a clue. Anderson said the search will continue and deputies have been assigned to check "isolated spots" in the area.

International Falls residents were inclined to agree with the sheriff that Danny was not kidnapped or murdered, but had ready perished in the bitter cold of the U. S.-Canadian border country.

Anderson, who has slept only a few hours since Danny disappeared from his home outside International Falls Wednesday, said "there is absolutely no evidence to indicate the boy has met with foul play."

He said he has no plans to start an FBI investigation of a possible kidnapping. Anderson added, however, that he was in constant touch with federal authorities.

Painter May Be Out Of Luck

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (UP)—Back about Dec. 12 a man started painting Harrison Elementary School at 13th and V Sts. NW.

Day after day he labored doing a neat job, but nobody paid much attention. He even worked late on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve. He hauled away his ladders last Tuesday.

Today it developed that no painting job had been ordered at the school.

John Rieck, assistant school superintendent in charge of buildings, said he had no idea who the man is or why he undertook the painting.

The painter had mentioned to the custodian that his bill would be $700, but he stands little chance of collecting.

"We can't pay for an unauthorized job," Rieck said.

Atomic Exhibit To Be In Monroe For Three Days

An "Atoms For Peace" exhibit is slated to be on display in Monroe Tuesday through Thursday, with one of the display panels to be concerned with the use of radioactive materials in agriculture. Sponsored by the Monroe Jaycees, the exhibit will be located at the corner of Jackson and DeSiard. No admission will be charged.

Officials said persons engaged in farming and gardening will find the agricultural portion of the display of particular interest. The use of radioactive elements and compounds in fertilizers has provided much valuable information on the use of these fertilizers for various types of crops.

The use of isotopes in agriculture is only a part of the exhibit, however. Visitors can learn about the entire field of atomic energy, from the nature of the atom itself, to its use in power plants to produce electricity.

The exhibit is made available through the museum division of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, Oak Ridge, Tenn.

An "Atoms For Peace" exhibit is slated to be on display in Monroe Tuesday through Thursday, with one of the display panels to be concerned with the use of radioactive materials in agriculture.

Sponsored by the Monroe Jaycees, the exhibit will be located at the corner of Jackson and DeSiard. No admission will be charged.

Officials said persons engaged in farming and gardening will find the agricultural portion of the display of particular interest. The use of radioactive elements and compounds in fertilizers has provided much valuable information for various types of crops.

The use of isotopes in agriculture is only a part of the exhibit, however. Visitors can learn about the entire field of atomic energy, from the nature of the atom itself, to its use in power plants to produce electricity.

The exhibit is made available through the museum division of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, Oak Ridge, Tenn.

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

Outlines Plan To Build Space Training Vehicle

By DR. I. M. LEVITT

In sharp contrast to the Russian system of keeping plans for satellites and space travel a deep secret, American engineers have been sharing their ideas with the whole world.

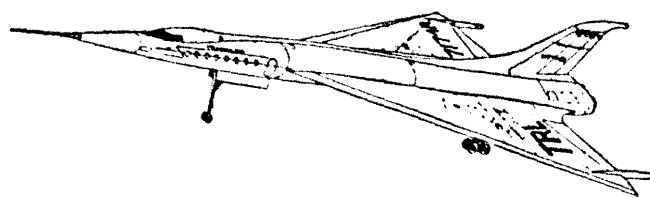

This is demonstrated in a new book, "Rocket Power and Space Flight," by G. Harry Stine, in which the author recounts proposals for a rocket ship — or rather two of them — which could carry men into space by methods now available.

Stine outlines a plan for building a rocket ship which could travel 1,500 miles and serve as a training vehicle for true space flights. The trainer, the GRIFFON, might actually become the model for a commercial rocket plane carrying passengers in long-distance flights over the globe.

Once it had been successfully trained in it could become the crew of a space ship, — to be called NOMAD — which would orbit the earth for scientific purposes for as long as 1,000 hours.

But first let us take a look at the proposal for the first ship, the GRIFFON.

It would use a 2,000-pound liquid oxygen and gasoline rocket engine with a thrust of 120,000 pounds (about half that of Sputnik I). The internal pressure for the engine is about 225 pounds per square inch. During the 90 seconds of burning time, oxygen and gasoline are flowing into the motor at the rate of 333 pounds of liquid oxygen per second and 143 pounds of gasoline per second.

The Griffon might become the model for a commercial passenger rocket plane for long-distance flights. At take-off, the plane would weigh 65,000 pounds.

At take-off the GRIFFON would weigh about 65,000 pounds of which 48,000 would be fuel. The ship, at landing, would weigh approximately 22,000 pounds. The ship would not look too unlike the modern jets we see in our skies today. It would be flat bottomed and have small, sharply swept back wings. The flat bottom of the fuselage will provide 90 per cent of the lift.

Now let us move ahead to 1961 and, in our mind's eye, visualize a trip of some 1,500 miles distant. The GRIFFON would take off vertically. As the engine fires, the ship will be tilted to assume a ballistic trajectory. At an altitude of 40 miles the fuel will be exhausted and the GRIFFON will continue up to the peak of its trajectory some 80 miles above the surface of the earth at 150 miles from its launch point.

At top speed it will be traveling at 4,000 miles per hour — about five times the speed of sound. To achieve this speed the initial acceleration at take-off will be 1.83 times the force of gravity, and at burnout the acceleration will reach 5.45 g's. After 300 seconds of free fall and zero gravity it will re-enter the atmosphere 300 miles from the launch point. Twenty-four minutes after take-off

Service Set For Victim Of Auto Accident

QUITMAN (Special) — Funeral services will be held this afternoon for James Anderson, 19-year-old local youth who died following an auto crash near El Dorado yesterday.

Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester R. Anderson, Sr., of Quitman, apparently lost control of the car he was driving on U. S. 167 26 miles north of El Dorado.

State troopers said he apparently dozed at the wheel of the car. Two passengers, William Griffith, and Richard Thrift, both 18 and of Quitman, were asleep on the back seat of the car. They received only minor injuries when the car left the road, hit a ditch, rolled over several times and came to rest among some trees. Anderson suffered possible broken neck, broken back, broken left arm and compound fracture of the right leg, officials said.

Services will be held at Antioch Presbyterian church near Quitman at 3 p.m. today, with the Rev. Joe Page officiating. Interment will follow in the church cemetery under the direction of Edmonds Funeral home of Jonesboro.

Survivors include his parents; a brother, L. R. Anderson, Jr., Shreveport; three sisters, Mrs. Geraldine Womack, Shreveport; Mrs. Nell Weems and Mrs. Zora Tinsley, both of Quitman.

WISCONSIN SKIING

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. — (UP) — The tourist trade is becoming more and more a year-round Wisconsin business with the opening of new motels and resorts in the ski area. All of the ski areas in 15 north-western Wisconsin counties have undergone additions and improvements to attract more tourists. Seventy resorts already have opened for the winter season.

New Mexico has the smallest surface water area of any state — 153 square miles.

The Griffon might become the model for a commercial passenger rocket plane for long-distance flights. At take-off, the plane would weigh 65,000 pounds.

square inch. During the 90 seconds of burning time, oxygen and gasoline are flowing into the motor at the rate of 333 pounds of liquid oxygen per second and 143 pounds of gasoline per second.

At take-off the GRIFFON would weigh about 65,000 pounds of which 43,000 would be fuel. The ship, at landing, would weigh approximately 22,000 pounds. The ship would not look too unlike the modern jets we see in our skies today. It would be flat bottomed and have small, sharply swept back wings. The flat bottom of the fuselage will provide 90 per cent of the lift.

Now let us move ahead to 1961 and, in our mind's eye, visualize a trip of some 1,500 miles distant. The GRIFFON would take off vertically. As the engine fires, the ship will be tilted to assume a ballistic trajectory. At an altitude of 40 miles the fuel will be exhausted and the GRIFFON will continue up to the peak of its trajectory some 80 miles above the surface of the earth at 150 miles from its launch point.

At top speed it will be traveling at 4,000 miles per hour — about five times the speed of sound. To achieve this speed the initial acceleration at take-off will be 1.83 times the force of gravity, and at burnout the acceleration will reach 5.45 g's. After 390 seconds of free fall and zero gravity it will re-enter the atmosphere 300 miles from the launch point. Twenty-four minutes after take-off it will land with a nominal landing speed at an airport some 1,500 miles away.

The beauty of this approach is that the tests for the entire system can be made with present-day hardware.

The prototype of the GRIFFON can be towed behind a jet bomber which will tow it to high altitudes and cast it loose for glide tests and practice landings. Following these aerodynamic tests, can come those of the engines. Vertical powered take-offs will be used with a light load of propellants to keep the cutoff velocity low.

Horizontal Flights

These flights will be made nearly horizontally so the rocket ship does not leave the atmosphere. Then gradually as the difficulties are overcome and as the pilots gain confidence, the trips can be longer and longer. Finally the 1,500 - mile trip may be undertaken.

This rocket ship will not be designed for travel alone. Author Stine points out that during the flight many studies vital to any future long - range space travel plans can be undertaken.

The pilot of the GRIFFON will be in gravity - free space for about 6 minutes — almost 10 times that experienced to date. The pilot's reaction to this completely alien environment can be studied. The dynamics of re-entry of a fast-moving rocket ship after a long flight can also be studied.

From this we can discover whether a pilot is capable of bringing this ship in or whether we must devise a "brain" which must land the ship for him. The GRIFFON can be used to test the systems which may be used in larger rocket ships and their abilities to travel through space.

Thus the GRIFFON is a rocket ship which will make man's first assault on space. From the results of these tests the future will be indicated.

Next week we will discuss the NOMAD — the next step in space.

Service Set For Victim Of Auto Accident

QUITMAN (Special) — Funeral services will be held this afternoon for James Anderson, 19-year-old local youth who died following an auto crash near El Dorado yesterday.

Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester R. Anderson, Sr., of Quitman, apparently lost control of the car he was driving on U. S. 167 26 miles north of El Dorado.

State troopers said he apparently dozed at the wheel of the car. Two passengers, William Griffith, and Richard Thrift, both 18 and of Quitman, were asleep on the back seat of the car. They received only minor injuries when the car left the road, hit a ditch, rolled over several times and came to rest among some trees. Anderson suffered possible broken neck, broken back, broken left arm and compound fracture of the right leg, officials said.

Services will be held at Antioch Presbyterian church near Quitman at 3 p.m. today, with the Rev. Joe Pace officiating. Interment will follow in the church cemetery under the direction of Edmonds Funeral home of Jonesboro.

Survivors include his parents; a brother, L. R. Anderson, Jr., Shreveport; three sisters, Mrs. Geraldine Womack, Shreveport; Mrs. Nell Weems and Mrs. Zora Tinsley, both of Quitman.
